ENEMY THROWN BACK ALONG SOMME

French Units Repulse Nazi Mass Attacks

Enemy Senses Threat To Entire Channel-Wedge — Allies May Try To Hold Dunkerque Indefinitely

PARIS, June 1.—The official French military spokesman hinted today that the Allies may try to hold Dunkerque indefinitely, after evacuation of the major part of the British and French armies from Flanders is completed.

The Allies have organized a powerfully entrenched camp at the Channel port, almost completely protected around its southern border by Yser floodwaters, the spokesman said, and have massed there officers, men, munitions and supplies enough to constitute a formidable defence.

By RALPH HEINZEN

British United Press Exclusive Cable to The Edmonton Bulletin.

PARIS, June 1.—Germany opened a ferocious mass attack on the Somme today, attempting to win back bridgeads which the French had established on the north bank on the 20-mile front between Amiens and the sea.

Sensing a threat to their entire Channel wedge, the Germans opened with a violent bombardment by field artillery. Next the roaring Stuka dive bombers swept over the French lines—only to meet with severe French resistance. Then the Nazi tanks went over, and finally the infantry in massed formations which the Germans had favored in the last war.

Again and again, at selected points on the Somme front, but particularly between Amiens and the Abbeville sector on the sea, the Germans attacked in force, only, according to official assertions, to be thrown back without gain. Two big attacks, it was disclosed, had been defeated yesterday, one at noon, the second at 6:45 p.m.

French Units Hacking Way To Sea

To the north, fighting back to back with the Germans almost surrounding them, the last of the French troops in the Lille pocket was reported to be hacking its way to the sea and new life.

It was asserted officially that the greater part of this mechanized, motorized army had actually succeeded in forcing its way through and had joined the remainder of the Allied army behind the Dunkerque water line.

66 WARPLANES LOST BY NAZIS DURING FRIDAY

Bombers Attack German Troops, Motorized Columns In Flanders

LONDON, June 1.—Destruction or serious damage to 66 German warplanes against 10 British losses in extensive raids over northern France was reported by the air ministry today.

Yesterday's toll, it said, was 56 Nazi planes at a cost of 16 British craft missing. Another 10 German planes were shot down about dawn today over Dunkerque, France, with one British plane lost.

Medium heavy British bombers attacked German troops, motorized columns and artillery in forays yesterday and last night in Flanders the ministry reported.

SUNK TORPEDO BOAT

It said naval aircraft also had sunk a German torpedo boat off the Belgian coast.

The communique said:

"Royal Air Force fighters continued to screen the evacuation of Allied troops from the northeast coast of France. Further reports show that during yesterday 56 enemy aircraft were destroyed or seriously damaged. Sixteen of our fighters are reported missing.

"At dawn this morning our fighter patrols over Dunkerque shot down 10 enemy fighters with

War Briefs

LONDON, June 1—Prime Minister Churchill was received in audience this afternoon by the King at Buckingham Palace.

LONDON, June 1—The diplomatic correspondent of the Daily Mail predicted today that Premier Mussolini will make a peace proposal before taking Italy into the war.

BIEL, Switzerland, June 1.—A Swiss fighting plane shot down a German bomber over Swiss territory today less than 20 miles from Berne. The four Germans in the crew were killed.

The rest of the men had been given up for lost. They were completely surrounded at one time. But it was asserted that most of them had got out and that there was hope still for the rest.

Except for these men—the smaller part of the French motorized northern army—the Allied rear guard, after a historic fight, was now safe within the protective arc of the Dunkerque armed camp. For the past 24-hours, it was said, attack after attack by the Germans had been resisted successfully, while evacuation of the army as a whole proceeded.

SWUNG IN WIDE ARC

More than half the lost French army, it was said, had swung in a wide arc northward and reached an undisclosed point safely with no Germans between them and Dunkerque.

Failing to break the Dunkerque arc, the Germans sent planes to bomb and machine gun the beaches on which Allied troops awaited embarkation. Allied losses, a war office analyst said, were small.

There had been a brief respite in the bombing because of bad weather.

It was asserted that the Allies would try to hold the Dunkerque line for the present and that it would be for the supreme war council to decide, eventually, whether the foothold should be maintained or the Dunkerque area evacuated.

MAGNETIC MINES

Hoping further to embarrass transport, the Germans have begun to drop magnetic mines from airplanes off Dunkerque.

Allied soldiers and marines, in the mopped cleaned of Calais, were reported continuing their resistance this morning. French artillery was reported punishing the Germans in the town.

German Hospital Raided In London

British United Press Exclusive Cable to The Edmonton Bulletin

LONDON, June 1. — Scotland Yard men today raided the German hospital at East Dalston, in the east end of London, arresting 29 patients and 30 alien nurses.

Detectives searched the hospital premises and belongings of the staff, apparently seeking fifth column elements.

Nurses from the London hospital replaced those taken into custody.

R.A.F. SUPPLIES FORCE HOLDING CALAIS CITADEL

Handful Of Soldiers And Marines Defend City Of Calais

By SIDNEY J. WILLIAMS
British United Press Exclusive Cable to The Edmonton Bulletin

LONDON, June 1.—A handful of intrepid British and French soldiers and marines, holding off a German army from the moated citadel of Calais, wrote a page in history today as their comrades at Dunkerque, 30 miles away, covered the final phase of embarkation of the Allied army of the north.

The mystery of the status of Calais, which the Germans claimed to have taken long ago, was dissipated by the disclosure that the British and French held out undaunted, and that Royal Air Force planes were dropping them drinking water, rifle, machine gun and pistol ammunition and hand grenades.

GORT COMMANDS

In the Dunkerque sector, so small now that it is called an entrenched camp, Gen. Viscount Gort, commanding the British Expeditionary force, one of the great heroes of the last war, was in the personal command of the Allied force before his return to England today.

Britain asserted jubilantly today that the Allied navy had rescued nearly four-fifths of the original British Expeditionary Force of the army of the north, and tens of thousands of their French and Belgian Allies.

The feat of evacuating a great army—estimates of its numbers are still widely divergent and based on unofficial reports or guesses—was regarded as almost incredible.

STORY OF CALAIS

The story of the Calais battle came out when it was disclosed that Royal Air Force bomber squadrons had dropped water, ammunition and grenades into the citadel yesterday.

Taking off from English fields, the great bombers carried the water in containers in their bomb racks, and dropped it by means of parachutes, through rifts in the dense smoke clouds.

Afterward a fleet of 39 British planes, accompanied by dive bombers flew over the citadel. The dive bombers attacked the Germans while the other planes dropped ammunition and hand grenades in the citadel.

The lines in the Dunkerque area had been drawn in behind the water barriers so that a relatively small force of determined men could defend them. It was indicated that the Allies might seek to hold out there for some time.

Ten Killed, 50 Wounded By Nazi Bombs In Givors

LYON, France, June 1.—Ten persons were killed and 50 wounded when German planes today bombed Givors, important manufacturing town in southeastern France 17 miles south of Lyon.

A number of buildings in the town were destroyed.

Givors is situated on the canal of Givors and on the Rhone river near where it is joined by the Gier river.

Receives Uniform

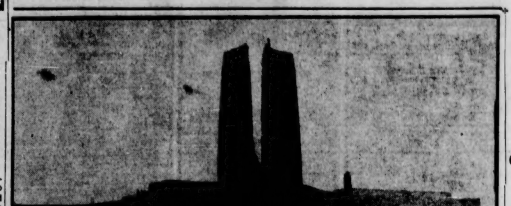

British United Press Exclusive Cable to The Edmonton Bulletin

PARIS, June 1.—Robert Montgomery, American motion picture actor, received his ambulance driver's uniform today. He will start for the front Monday.

All But 15,000 British Troops Evacuated From Flanders Zone

Nazis Desecrate Canadian Memorial At Vimy

Erected at Vimy Ridge in remembrance of the 60,000 Canadians who gave their lives in the First Great War, the beautiful memorial shown above was smashed to pieces in deliberate bombing attacks by German airmen, it was learned from British Tommies who have returned from the battle in Flanders. Bombers also blasted British, French and Canadian cemeteries in the Vimy Ridge area. The monument's dedication by King Edward VIII on July 26, 1936, was attended by 6,000 Canadian veterans who made the pilgrimage to Flanders for that occasion.

ITALY STOPS AUTOMOBILES TO SAVE GAS

Conservation Of Gasoline Final Phase Of War Preparation

By REYNOLDS PACKARD
British United Press Exclusive Cable to The Edmonton Bulletin

ROME, June 1.—Italy ordered citizens to cease operating gasoline-consuming vehicles, effective today.

The storing of gasoline was one of the final phases of Italy's preparations for war and in some quarters it was believed that Premier Benito Mussolini might announce on Tuesday that he was ready to enter the conflict on the side of Germany.

All gasoline-consuming vehicles, including private automobiles and motorcycles, were ordered off the streets. Besides electric and coke-burning auto busses, only anti-quated automobiles consuming coke, and automobiles of Italian officials were circulating.

Motor traffic throughout Italy was reduced immediately 90 per cent.

BAD SHORTAGE

Italy suffered a severe gasoline shortage during the Ethiopean war, and supplies which she had stored up prior to that campaign were nearly exhausted by the time it was over. Italians were unable to obtain gasoline from other countries because of the "sanctions" laid down by the League of Nations.

Special significance was attached to the arrival today of a special military mission which Generalissimo Francisco Franco of Spain had sent to Italy to inspect Italian defenses. The mission reached Milan from Genoa, and went immediately to the Brenner pass. It probably will spend two days in the north and later go to Berlin.

There has been close collaboration between Spain and Italy since the close of the Spanish civil war, during which Italy gave Franco considerable aid.

Mussolini will meet with his cabinet on Tuesday morning. That night he will report to the Fascist Grand Council. It already has been announced officially that the cab-

Canada's Memorial At Vimy Ridge Smashed To Pieces By Nazis

By EDWIN JOHNSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, June 1.—Canada's memorial to her first Great War dead atop Vimy Ridge has been smashed to pieces in deliberate bombing attacks by the Germans, according to British Tommies returned from the hell of the fighting in Flanders.

One soldier, weary and battle-stained after the bitter rearguard action of the Allies, told the story of a few hours after landing in England:

"I stood near the memorial and saw German dive bombers sweep down and release a load of bombs over the memorial," he said. "It was completely shattered. The attack was obviously deliberate."

After the planes disappeared, the soldier said, he and others walked to the ruins of the towering stone shaft which dominated the plains stretching northeast towards the Belgian frontier and picked up splinters as souvenirs.

CEMETERIES BOMBED

An eye-witness to the destruction of the memorial said the planes returned and bombed British, French and Canadian military cemeteries in the vicinity of Vimy Ridge, blasting the tiny crosses into fragments and wrecking the graves.

Ten days ago newspaper correspondents in the battle area had seen the sandbagged memorial intact. At that time fierce fighting was taking place south and parallel to Vimy Ridge. A few days later, however, the Germans announced the capture of the Vimy area.

The memorial was unveiled in 1936 by King Edward VIII. It was at Vimy Ridge on April 9, 1917, that 100,000 Canadian soldiers stormed to victory. In that week 13,297 officers and men were killed or wounded.

Attending the ceremony as guests of Canada were Rt. Hon. Sir Robert and Lady Borden, Rt. Hon. Sir George and Lady Perley, Sir Eugene Fiset, wartime deputy minister of national defence, Lady Byng, widow of the victor of Vimy, and Lady Currie, widow of Sir Arthur.

"Dunkerque"

NEW YORK, June 1.—In an editorial entitled simply "Dunkerque," The New York Times said today:

"So long as the English tongue survives, the word Dunkerque will be spoken with reverence. For in that harbor in such a hell as never blazed on earth before at the end of a lost battle, the rage and blindness that have hidden the soul of democracy fell away. There, beaten but unconquered, in shining splendor, she faced the enemy.

"They sent away the wounded first. Men died so that others could escape. It was not so simple a thing as courage, which the Nazis had in plenty. It was not so simple a thing as discipline, which can be hammered into men by a drill sergeant. It was not the result of careful planning, for there could have been little. It was the common man of the free countries, rising in all his glory out of mill, office, factory, mine, farm and ship, applying to war the lessons learned when he went down the shaft to bring out trapped comrades, when he hurled the lifeboat through the surf, when he endured poverty and hard work for his children's sake.

"This shining thing in the souls of free men Hitler cannot command, or seize, or conquer. He has crushed it, where he could, from German hearts.

"It is the great tradition of democracy. It is the future. It is victory."

AIR TRAINING IS TELESCOPED INTO 4 MONTHS

By GRANT DEXTER
Edmonton Bulletin Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA, June 1. — Two years work under the air training plan is being telescoped into four months.

This is the response of the civil aviation authorities here under Hon. C. D. Howe to the German break through in France which threatened a break down of the whole air training plan.

With the German break through Britain was no longer able to carry out her part in the plan. Britain cannot spare Canada the thousands of acres of engines and flying machines which were to have been her contribution to it. With this breakdown, late last week, Britain waived her earlier advice which was, as late as Thursday and Friday, to stick to the schedules under which full scale training would not begin for upwards of one year.

Canada suddenly was left on her own with the air training plan. The immediate response, notwithstanding the great gaps in the equipment for the scheme, was to throw the entire program into high gear. Mr. Howe asked the civil aviation experts, in charge of the landing fields for the plan to throw away the schedules and complete all fields at the earliest possible moment.

In the result, two years construction is being telescoped into four months. All landing fields and hangars and barracks will be completed before snow flies.

GENERAL GORT RETURNS FROM FLANDERS ZONE

By H. L. PERCY
British United Press Exclusive Cable to The Edmonton Bulletin

LONDON, June 1.—Gen. Viscount Gort, commander of the British Expeditionary Force, arrived in England today.

Lord Gort's arrival was believed to indicate that the rearguard action before Dunkerque was almost ended and that most of the troops that could be rescued had been removed from France.

It was stated that Lord Gort left France after handing over the command of his remaining troops to a "less senior" officer as a result of the progress made in evacuation.

This action, it was stated, was due to the consequent reduction in size of the force remaining in northern France.

Nazi-Laid Trap Fails To Snare Heroic Soldiers

Only Some 45,000 Men Left In Belgium Of 270,000 Allied Troops Originally Trapped There

LONDON, June 1.—British Tommies saved from the Nazi-laid Flanders trap by the greatest rescue in military history estimated today that all but one division—15,000 men—of the original British expeditionary force of 175,000 men has been safely removed from Flanders.

At the same time Health Minister Malcolm MacDonald announced the government regarded the danger of a direct German attack on England soon as so real that plans for the dispersal of school children should be ready by the beginning of next week.

"Parents who do not register their children by Monday evening run the risk of not having their children taken away," MacDonald said.

He explained that "the situation regarding evacuation of our large cities and industrial towns is reviewed by the government each morning."

The home-coming Tommies, saved from annihilation by their comrades' brilliant rearguard action, said the single British division and two divisions of General Rene Prioux's French army were the only Allied troops still covering the Dunkerque retreat.

"This would mean that only some 45,000 men were left in Flanders of the 270,000 Allied troops which originally were trapped.

General Viscount Gort, B.E.F. commander-in-chief, was likened by the British press to Sir John Moore, hero of the Peninsular War, who saved his army from annihilation by Napoleon's troops. Returning soldiers said Lord Gort had taken personal command of the rearguard fighting.

FULL AGREEMENT

While all of London's evening papers proclaimed the Germans had lost 500,000 men in their attempt to wipe out the B.E.F., an official announcement said the Allied supreme war council met yesterday in Paris and reached full agreement regarding all measures which the situation calls for.

Boatloads of soldiers moved steadily across the channel. The movement was screened by the Royal Air Force, which shot down 56 German aircraft yesterday, with a loss of 16 British planes, and shot down 10 Nazi fighters over Dunkerque this morning.

CITY POLICE DEALING WITH ENEMY ALIENS

Special department to deal with possible action by enemy aliens and subversive activities in general has been set up by the city police department, it was announced by Det. Inspector John Leslie, Saturday.

This department, in charge of a veteran detective, will work in co-operation with a member of the C.I.B. division of the R.C.M.P., who has been specially attached to the city police force for this purpose.

Hundreds of complaints concerning statements of aliens and others which might constitute a fifth column menace here are being investigated. It is planned to add to the staff of this department if the situation appears to demand increasing supervision of the enemy alien element.

CZECH PILOTS GETTING EVEN WITH GERMANS

PARIS, June 1 — Eighteen Czecho-Slovak fliers with the French air force have shot down 41 German planes in the last few days, Czecho-Slovak authorities said today. One sergeant alone accounted for 12 and one lieutenant seven, the announcement said.

Subversion Charged

MONTREAL, June 1—Joseph C. Farr of Toronto, an organizer of the National Unity party, and John M. Lorimer, also of Toronto, and a party worker, were arraigned here today on charges laid under the Defence of Canada regulations.

WHEAT MART TO STAY OPEN BALANCE YEAR

Government Decides Not To Close Exchange For Present

OTTAWA, June 1.—The Winnipeg Grain Exchange will remain open at least for the balance of its crop year which ends next July 31, Trade Minister J. A. MacKinnon announced today.

"The government has decided not to close the Winnipeg market at least for the balance of this crop year," the minister said.

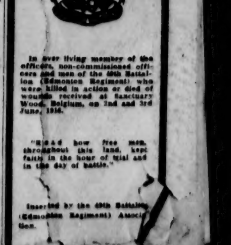

He also stated that the Canadian Wheat Board yesterday sold 50,000,000 bushels of wheat to the buying agency of the British government at a price considerably above the present market.

Officials of the Canadian wheat board have been in Ottawa for a week discussing with the minister the situation which developed on May 18 when, following a break in the market, wheat prices were pegged on the Winnipeg exchange at 70⅝ cents for May futures, 71⅝ for July and 73⅝ for October.

Since then wheat quotations have stiffened considerably above the pegged prices with July futures selling today at 75⅛ and October at 77⅞.

Belgian Corps Still In Fight

NEW YORK, June 1.—A British Broadcasting Corporation announcement heard this morning by National Broadcasting Company said "at least one Belgian army corps still is fighting side by side with the Allies." The announcement quoted "well-informed circles in Paris" as saying the force was commanded by the former commander of the Liege district, who had refused to accept King Leopold III's order to surrender.

In ever living memory of the officers, non-commissioned officers and men of the 49th Battalion (Edmonton Regiment) who were killed in action or died of wounds received at Sanctuary Wood, Belgium, on 2nd and 3rd June, 1916.

"Blind how free men, throughout this land, kept faith in the hour of trial and in the day of battle."

Inserted by the 49th Battalion (Edmonton Regiment) Association.

Units Announced For Canada Third, Fourth Divisions

OTTAWA, June 1.—The defence minister, Hon. Norman Rogers, early today announced the units which will comprise the 3rd division, Canadian Active Service Force and the rifle battalions for the 4th division.

All will be authorized to start recruiting up to war strength immediately and on completion of recruiting will probably proceed to one of the large military camps which will operate all across the country throughout the summer.

The selection reflects changes in the organization of divisional artillery and infantry since the 1st and 2nd divisions were ordered to mobilize at the start of the war. Instead of the 12 batteries ordered to mobilize for the first two divisions only 10 are called for the 3rd.

Instead of three field brigades of four batteries each the new artillery organization calls for three field regiments of two batteries each and four anti-tank batteries.

One unit, mobilized for the 2nd division, the Cameron Highlanders of Ottawa, machine gun, is transferred to the 3rd division. This peculiarity arises from the new infantry organization as in the 3rd division only three battalions are called for and one brigade against four called for the 1st and 2nd divisions.

As in the case of the two earlier divisions the selection is widely representative of all parts of Canada.

The units follow:

3rd Division, C.A.S.F.

a loss of one of our aircraft. A naval aircraft later bombed and sank an enemy torpedo boat off the Belgian coast.

"Bombing operations against the enemy in Flanders were continued yesterday evening and during the night by medium heavy bombers. Hits were obtained on enemy troops on the march, on motor transport columns and on heavy artillery. Lock gates and bridges were destroyed.

"Two of our bombers and reconnaissance aircraft were lost in these operations."

A later air ministry communique said:

"Three Nazi torpedo motorboats prowling off the Belgian coast in the hope of attacking British expeditionary force transports, were attacked by aircraft this morning. One of them was sunk.

"Aircraft belonging to the fleet air arm unit co-operating with the coastal command made a line of six bombs. A minute after the bursts the pilot saw that two of the motorboats were stationary and silent. There was no sign of the third."

Raw Furs Export Tax Is Validated

OTTAWA, June 1.—The House of Commons last night passed a bill to validate the tax on raw furs exported from the Yukon Territory provided that no ordinance passed by the Yukon Territorial Council on May 20, 1919. At the request of George Black (Yukon) the bill was amended to make clear it did not affect certain judicial actions now pending.

Warning Given On Lighting Cut-Off

In order to permit electricians to make permanent repairs to the power cable, which snapped last Tuesday night, disrupting lighting service on the South Side, the power will be cut twice during the weekend, Commissioner R. J. Gibb said Saturday.

All those homes effected by the fracture of the cable—all are on the South side—will be effected by the power cut. It will be cut for five or ten minutes at midnight Saturday and again for a few minutes at 11 p.m. Sunday.

ONLY 15,000 BRITONS LEFT IN FLANDERS

PRISONERS FED

One small boatload of soldiers picked up two German airmen shot down during a bombing attack and brought them along. The prisoners were given sandwiches and coffee with their captors before being taken away to prison.

The epic of this "second Corunna" (referring to Sir John Moore's retreat from the Spanish Peninsula in 1809) continued at high tide today that it would be consummated by the rescue of most of those who risked their lives that their comrades might escape.

"Every gun and every possible plane that can be spared," the Press Association said, "will be hammering the Germans to bring about this final and complete triumph."

British quarters emphasized that the operations in Flanders had been a "joint Allied action," British and French armies and navies working in "close unity with a steadiness never excelled."

As Britain became more concerned about the safety of children in the event of a German attack, it was announced that high tides today will remove 47,000 children tomorrow from east and southeast coast towns to new reception areas.

GREATER SAFETY

Health Minister MacDonald said the government could not give "any guarantee that anybody in any part of the country will be absolutely safe, but there is clearly much greater safety in a scattered population than in one densely packed."

Mr. MacDonald said that only 87,000 of London's 500,000 children had been registered thus far with the government.

In long strings of tug-hauled coal barges, private yachts, motorboats, fishing smacks, freighters, small passenger craft and warships, the men from Flanders poured into southeast coast ports where they had remained up night after night, pouring tea, making sandwiches and helping to nurse the injured.

EAGER TO GO BACK

Soldiers who had played football yesterday on the sand dunes of the French coast came home, some of them without clothes as they had to remain in hiding until new uniforms could be rushed to them. They had undergone such shelling that many dig into the banks to escape the splinters, but they arrived in England angry and eager to go back.

On the home front the British faced with contempt Berlin reports that all the writers' prophet, Joseph Goebbels, was about to announce Italy's entry into the war.

In the first place they didn't believe Benito Mussolini would permit anyone but himself to make the announcement, secondly, they did not feel absolutely sure Italy would enter the war; thirdly, they had such an overpowering job in the front of minds for so long they did not care much.

Meanwhile it was disclosed Prime Minister Churchill and Clement Attlee, Lord Privy Seal, had flown to Paris yesterday and there attended a meeting of the Allied Supreme War Council.

TEXT OF ANNOUNCEMENT

The text of the announcement from Prime Minister Churchill's office at No. 10 Downing street:

"Great Britain was represented by Mr. Winston Churchill and Mr. Attlee, accompanied by Sir Edward Campbell, General Sir John Dill, General Ismay and General Spears.

"The French representatives were M. Paul Reynaud and Marshal Petain, accompanied by General Weygand, Admiral Darlan and M. Paul Baudouin.

"The Supreme War Council carried out a general survey of the situation and reached full agreement regarding all the measures which that situation called for.

Admiral Sydney R. Freemantle, retired writing in the magazine "The Navy," said that from a naval viewpoint Italy's entry into the war would be "little more than an annoyance to the Allies. To Italy, on the other hand, it might well be disastrous."

Field Marshal Sir Archibald Montgomery-Massingberd, former chief of the Imperial general staff in peacetime, wrote that Mussolini "has succeeded in ruining a very noisy enthusiasm among the ignorant youth of the nation, who think there is glory for themselves to be got out of war.

"When the bombs begin to fall and the machine guns begin to rattle, this youthful and misguided enthusiasm will quickly fade away."

Retired Air Commodore L. E. O. Charlton wrote that a war with Italy would put the Allied air force on the defensive immediately.

This has only added fuel to the fiery demands for more planes brought back by the bruised and weary Tommies rescued from Flanders.

Belief Advanced Norway Invasion Used As Diversion

WINNIPEG, June 1.—Belief that the German invasion of Norway was part of a plan to divert the British Expeditionary Force from northern France and so weaken the Allied front there was expressed last night by Rear Admiral H. A. Sheridan, admiralty representative on the British supply board in Canada and the United States.

Canada's Memorial At Vimy Ridge Smashed To Pieces By Nazis

from Canada, was organized by the Imperial War Graves and directed by the National Vimy Pilgrimage Committee composed of representatives of national veterans' organizations.

The stately Canadian memorial on the crest of Vimy Ridge was erected in remembrance of the 60,000 Canadians who gave their lives in the first Great War and was dedicated by King Edward VIII on July 26, 1936, in a ceremony attended by 6,000 veterans from the Dominion who made the long pilgrimage to Flanders.

The monument was 225 feet long, 135 feet wide and towered 135 feet in the air. It was designed by Walter Allward, Toronto sculptor, and took six years to construct.

Towering pylons reached into the sky from the base of the memorial and at the white-robed Canada brooding over her dead sons who lie in the fields below, are the central figure in front of the pylons. Other heroic figures were at both ends of the memorial.

The symbol of Canada's sorrow and achievement in storming the ridge April 9, 1917, was dedicated by King Edward in the presence of the Vimy pilgrimage and high dignitaries representing the Canadian, British and French governments.

Official Canadian representatives were Rt. Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Justice minister; Hon. Ian Mackenzie, then minister of national defence and now minister of pensions and national health, and Hon. C. G. Power, then minister of pensions and national health and recently appointed air minister.

President Albert Lebrun of France represented his country at the dedication. The land on which the memorial stood was presented to the Canadian people by the French government as a gesture of gratitude to the memory of Canada's fighting men.

Attack On Vimy Is Condemned In City

Wanton, willful destruction by Hun bestiality of the Canadian War Memorial at Vimy Ridge and the ravishing of British, French and United States war cemeteries in the wave after wave of enemy airplanes found wholesale condemnation in this city Saturday. Returned soldiers and others bitterly denounced the unjustified attacks reported from France. All, however, agreed that the cemeteries were in line with the Hunnish frame of mind and the unbelievable acts committed by the Hun in this war and the last.

DESPICABLE ACT

"I think the destruction of the war memorial and bombing of cemeteries is the most despicable action that any uniformed soldier can carry out," declared Lt.-Col. E. Brown, M.M., E.D., area commandant.

"Such acts are quite in line with the atrocities committed by the Huns in this war as well as in the last one. Their action appears the more despicable by reason of the steps taken by the R.A.F. with regard to cemeteries in Germany to preserve the war cemeteries. British delegations visited Germany and German delegations visited London to show that hard feelings no longer existed so far as the war dead were concerned.

MARK OF HUN

"But I am not surprised to hear that the Huns have resorted to such tactics. It is the mark of the Hun and there is no escape from their inherent training and characteristics. Any nation that will massacre gun women and children refugees and which seeks protection behind women's skirts while committing atrocities is capable of anything."

Col. F. C. Jamieson, K.C., former commanding officer of the Alberta Dragoons "overseas" "The Germans have deliberately slapped Canada in the face. Their action ought to intensify the recruiting of Canadian units to go over to the battle front to adequately deal with this insult to our war dead.

Carl E. Berg, president, Edmonton Trades and Labor Council: "This action is typical of the Huns' total disregard for all the decencies. There is but one answer to this affront to the memorial for our Canadian dead. Hitler and his hordes of despoilers must be destroyed."

A. E. Nightingale, hon.-president of the Red Cheveron Club, and chairman of the Edmonton Citizens' Cenotaph committee: Canadians will remember that against the German people—and will never forgive. In the meantime for every German bomb which hit this sacred tomb Canadian pilots will hurl thousands where they will be the most effective—and it won't be on German war memorials.

Destruction Vimy Memorial Is Tragedy

OTTAWA, June 1.—Major-General Victor Odlum, of Vancouver, commander of the 2nd Division of the Canadian Active Service Force, today said that desecration of the Vimy Memorial is a tragedy "although nothing more than I expected of the Hun; it is so typical of him."

"When I was in France three weeks ago I visited the memorial. It was the first time I had been there since the last war. I am afraid all our cemeteries in France will be similarly treated by the enemy. There are seven other cemeteries in France and Belgium under the care of the Canadian Battlefields Memorials Commission. Vimy was the largest and the next largest was at St. Julien in Belgium."

STRENGTHEN DETERMINATION

Brigadier W. W. Foster of Vancouver, past president of the Canadian Legion, which sponsored the pilgrimage of veterans to Vimy in 1936 for the dedication of the memorial, said this act will serve to strengthen this country's determination to carry this through to the end and vanquish a foe who would stoop to such useless destruction."

Defence Minister Norman Rogers said: "We have had no official confirmation of the destruction of the Vimy Memorial. If the report is correct, this new act of German vandalism will only serve to strengthen the will to victory of the Canadian people."

"This dreadful outrage is merely another evidence of the Hun mentality," said Hon. R. B. Hanson, Conservative house leader.

"Canadians to whom this memorial is sacred as representing the supreme sacrifice of sons, relatives and friends will have their faith in the Allied cause not by words alone but by deeds.

"All such actions as this will stir our people and surely our government to an invincible determination to use every ounce of strength to defeat this enemy of civilization."

Sculptor Allward Saddened By News

TORONTO, June 1.—Sculptor Walter S. Allward last night received with sad and sorrow eye-witness reports from London that German bombers have deliberately shattered the Canadian War Memorial which he designed and on which he labored for 14 years.

"I only hope the reports are not true," the 72-year-old-sculptor told The Canadian Press at his home in suburban York Mills. "It seemed inevitable, however, that this terrible thing would happen in these terrible days. The Huns have gone quite mad.

WANTON THING

"It seems like such a wanton thing. The memorial, you know, is in an open field. It isn't in the heart of a village and there aren't any military objectives nearby—only the cemeteries in the neighborhood and they should all around."

Allward expressed hope the $1,000,000 memorial, which commemorated the valorous deeds of Canada's first Great War dead, might not be beyond repair. He added: "But that is in the hands of the gods."

"This is a sad commentary on civilization," he continued, his voice trembling. "Destroyed to have reached an understanding whereby Japan would help Italy maintain Ethiopia economically. It also was understood that other Italian colonial problems in connection with the possibility of Italy's entry into the war also discussed, and agreements reached in principle.

It has been said that all preparations are complete for such an eventuality.

"Something is expected to break fairly soon," said a French spokesman.

The decision not to proceed with the accords was made as the immediate aftermath of a rupture in economic and rearmament control negotiations between Great Britain and Italy, authorized spokesmen said.

Italy Calls Up Additional Forces

ROME, June 1.—Italy today called up 10,000 non-commissioned officers to supplement a force of 10,000 enlisted last fall.

Simultaneously spring military manoeuvres were reported under way in northern Italy, with one full army corps engaged in exercises near Florence.

Dispatches from Madrid told of growing insistance there that the British relinquish their hold on Gibraltar—a demand which has been made repeatedly by the Italian press.

Comments in the Italian press left little doubt that Italy intends to enter the war as an ally of Germany but the question of where and when she intends to strike was veiled by a grim official silence.

France, meanwhile, was the object of a new series of posters displayed throughout the country which proclaimed that the island of Corsica, Napoleon's birthplace, was by rights Italian.

Greece, her independence guaranteed by the Allies, was warned by Pravda that partisanship toward Britain and France or an Allied move toward Salonika, Greek port which was a last-war Allied naval base, would bring Italian troops marching through the Balkans.

inet meeting will have an important bearing on Italy's position regarding the war.

Italy's preparations for war were believed now complete.

PLANS EVACUATION

Plans for the evacuation of cities in northern Italy already have been made, and the army is ready to march.

Hundreds of Americans crowded trains and highways to Genoa to catch the United States liner Manhattan sailing at noon today.

Shipping officials said that more than 1,800 Americans had booked passage on the ship. What may prove to be the last American boat train left Rome last night for Genoa. Aboard it were hundreds of newly called up recruits being rushed to northern defense posts. Among the passengers were mothers, wives and children of American diplomatic and consular officials, journalists, industrialists and business men who remained behind. There also were scores of Poles returning to the United States from Vatican City.

In authoritative Vatican circles it was said that although there had been conversations in London and Rome, in collaboration with American diplomats, to have the Holy See attempt to persuade Italy to remain aloof, the attitude of Pope Pius was that nothing more along that line could be done.

BREAKS OFF TALKS

(In London it was said that Italy had broken off negotiations for a contraband control agreement providing that the Allies would dispense with inspecting Italian ships in return for assurances that the ships would carry only cargoes previously listed with the Allied authorities.)

According to one report current in ecclesiastical circles it had been made clear that Italy would keep out of the war on one condition—that her promised neutrality would be followed by cessation of hostilities and a conference to reconstruct Europe along the lines already indicated by Italy and Germany.

Japan was expected to offer Italy some aid in event Mussolini decides to enter the war, it was said. Government officials and members of a Japanese commercial mission visiting here were understood to have reached an understanding whereby Japan would help Italy maintain Ethiopia economically. It also was understood that other Italian colonial problems in connection with the possibility of Italy's entry into the war discussed, and agreements reached in principle.

TOMMY GETS FREE LESSON IN SWIMMING

LONDON, June 1.—As disheveled Tommies returning from Flanders stepped off a train under a blacked-out trainshed, one soldier clung to it a moment to a porter.

"Had a rough time, chum?" said a porter.

The Tommy straightened up and, with a grin, replied: "We've learned to swim anyway."

Alberta Peace Agreement Gets Renewal Saturday

Automatic renewal of the agreement between the Dominion and province by which the R.C.M.P. was carried out in Alberta for the policing has been carried out for the past five years under a pact which called for continuation until cancelled by either party on one year's notice.

Expiry date was Friday for giving notice but neither party gave notice, so the agreement continues.

Under the agreement, the province pays the Dominion $275,000 a year, of which $225,000 is for police services and $50,000 for transportation of prisoners.

Officials Look For Pro-Nazis

Mayor John W. Fry and city commissioners are investigating a report made to them this week by Sidney Rowcott and the Married Ex-Servicemen's Association that there are 14 persons of pro-Nazi leaning in the city employ.

The report said that the men were employed in "outside" tasks and were not members of the city hall staff, all of whom were declared "100 per cent loyal."

City officials stated their continued belief that no disloyal or pro-Nazis in the city service but were making the investigation "just in case."

British Warplanes Excellent But Many More Badly Needed

By SAM ROBERTSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, June 1.—The young Englishman in Royal Air Force blue standing beside a Hurricane fighter, a plane that carried him in triumph through many brushes with the German terror that rides the sky, said simply:—

"We can whack the daylights out of Jerry with these fine planes, but we need more of them—many more of them."

He said it so calmly that I missed the full impact until a worn British soldier saved from the Flanders "pocket of hell" half stumbled from the troop train today and cried: "For God's sake give us more pla nes."

Behind him another Tommy gave the assurance:

"If we had enough planes we would cut the Huns to pieces."

These brave men who somehow fought for a fortnight under the roaring canopy of bombing and machine-gunning Nazi planes and came out alive told of the gallantry of Allied airmen in attempting to stem the enemy's locust-like attacks.

CAN'T COPE WITH ALL

But while French and British fliers fought and won over Hitler's air fighters in one sector, other waves of Nazi planes that could not be opposed effectively because of the Allies' numerical deficiency roamed elsewhere sowing bombs and bullets of destruction.

The immensity of Germany's sky armada is unknown. Estimates range from 10,000 to 20,000 warplanes. An unofficial French source reported that Hitler hurled 2,000 planes against the harried Allies in the first phase of all-out warfare.

Arch gambler though he is, he would not have gambled with that number if he had not tremendous reserves on which to fall back.

The number of planes the Allies can command has not been made public. However, indications at every hand are that it is not a match numerically for the German fleet. Invariably air ministry communiques tell of fearless Allied airmen encountering formations that outnumber them two, three or more times over.

That the R.A.F. and their French comrades have been able to inflict losses three and four times as great as they have suffered is a monumental tribute to their air ability and planes.

PROUD OF PLANES

I learned that the men of the R. A.F. are more than satisfied with their planes when I visited a fighter station. A young aviator standing beside his hurricane looked at it like a proud parent.

"She handles like a jewel, will bank on a sixpence, and climbs like a homesick angel," he said.

He indicated the four machine guns bristling from each wing and explained that each fires 1,150 bullets a minute. He multiplied that figure by eight to give the stunning pace of its death chatter, and then told this story of its firepower:

"One of our hurricanes caught a German from the side with a full burst. The bullets ripped the tail right off the plane. It was as though a can opener had done the job."

He was waiting for the day's flight orders as he stood there and talked of other days. It was the same story told in the communiques. Jerry always had the great advantage in numbers but always finished with greater losses.

NAZIS BAD MARKSMEN

One explanation for "Jerry's poor bagging average" was that "the blighter is a bad marksman."

When the orders finally came he and his squadron mates climbed into their powerful planes hurriedly but calmly. I wanted to ask how anyone could be so nonchalant knowing that reception committee several times stronger than the squadron was likely to be met above the clouds, but hesitated to speak of danger in a time like that.

He must have sensed the question was in my mind for it was then that he said without a trace of braggadocio:

"We can whack the daylights out of Jerry with these fine planes, but we need more of them, plenty more of them."

He waved a cheery farewell and as an afterthought shouted over the thunder of the motors:

"Please tell that to Canada. And say we can use more of the fine fliers she sent us in the last war."

BEAUHARNOIS BILL APPROVED IN COMMITTEE

Tories Urge Safeguards To Protect Public Interest

OTTAWA, June 1.—The government's bill for diversion from the St. Lawrence river of an additional 30,000 cubic second feet of water by the Beauharnois Light, Heat and Power Company was approved in committee stage in the House of Commons last night and stood over for third reading.

The Beauharnois scandal of 10 years ago was only briefly mentioned in debate, but Conservatives urged safeguards in the contract to protect the public interest. Spokesmen for the Co-Operative Commonwealth Federation protested the basic principle of the bill and voiced fears of a power monopoly.

POWER FOR WAR NEEDS

Hon. C. D. Howe, transport minister, sponsoring the measure, said war needs made the additional power necessary. The proposed diversion would increase power output there from 450,000 to 700,000 horse power.

An additional 50,000 horse power could be produced at once by diverting enough water to operate standby generators already installed. Development of the remaining new power would be progressive over a year or so.

Mr. How said the government at present had in mind an explosives plant which would use 12,000 horsepower itself.

Mr. Howe said the Beauharnois ship channel, which would be part of the 25-foot waterway development, would become navigable as soon as the dominion erected flight locks, which would cost $11,000,000. The canal, built by the company, cost about $16,000,000.

Angus MacInnis (CCF., Vancouver East) said the time had come when governments should take seriously their administration of the resources of the country for the people of the country. He held the magnitude of the issue involved here made necessary consideration by a special committee where experts could be called.

CRITICISM RAPPED

Mr. MacInnis referred to the record of R. A. C. Henry, present head of Beauharnois and an official, without pay, in the munitions and supply department.

Mr. Howe immediately accused Mr. MacInnis of sabotaging the war effort by criticizing such men. Mr. Howe wished he had more men like Mr. Henry in the munitions department for he was one of the most valuable engineers in the country.

The Conservative leader, Hon. R. B. Hanson, discussed the whole history of Beauharnois but made only passing reference to the political repercussions arising from that development only 10 years ago.

Mr. Howe said Beauharnois had obtained power from the Quebec government to divert 32,000 cubic second feet and had now arranged with that government for an additional 30,000 cubic second feet, but no further diversion may be made without approval of the Dominion parliament which has control over navigation.

Application for this authority was made 18 months ago. There seemed no good reason at that time for diverting additional water through the Beauharnois power canal but the situation had changed with the outbreak of war.

A heavily increased demand for electric power now existed for industrial purposes.

Beauharnois is the largest and principal supplier of power in the Montreal area and also exports power to Ontario.

The minister said he had received representations from both the Ontario and Quebec Authorities that they need large additional blocks of power from Beauharnois.

Theory Of 'Blitzkrieg' Getting First Major Test Says Military Expert

Major Hugh Bell, a student of military affairs for over 20 years and a veteran of the Great War, has written the following tactical and strategical analysis of the present fighting for the British United Press and The Edmonton Bulletin.—EDITOR.

By MAJOR HUGH M. BELL
British United Press Special Correspondent

Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin
Copyright 1940 by British United Press

In the science of war there are two great stages—the preliminary or preparatory, usually called the strategic, and the active phase, when the tactical employment of armed power occurs. At this time, on one of the battle fronts chosen by the aggressor power the strategy has yielded to the tactical—and the battles now raging at the spear heads of the five advancing columns enters upon the deciding phase of opposing military skill plus materials and morale.

It is an acknowledged fact that an aggressor who, as a part of a long range economic and military plan, can devote his war school and the staffs of all his standing or projected formations to the study of the terrain they mean to conquer will by reason of initiative have either a complete or limited success.

POINTS TO ATTAIN

In modern war the air arm, plus motorized advance formations supported by heavy mechanized troops, having the gun power of many batteries of even 1914-19 artillery should attain:

1—All vital points of transport systems.

2—Dislocate civil and fiscal administration of an area.

3—Secure the industrial demoralization of the victim.

4—Execute this at such speed as to enable artillery, infantry, police services and a new administration to follow not more than a few hours behind the advanced formations.

We have witnessed such an attempt and its partial success. It succeeded where preparatory resistance lacked any ability to equalize resistance to attack.

The defenders, however, have gained several tactical advantages. One, they have forced the aggressor from the plane of grand strategy to the role of tactical exploitation not planned for as a possibility in the initial first ten days.

CAUSE DILEMMA

Again, they have caused what is the devil's dilemma of military operations—the rolling up in the forward zone of advance, of mobile equipment and with the inevitable congestion that results on roads entering the front and paralleling it, a confusion that exhausts both personnel engaged and the staff who should, if humanly possible, enjoy some degree of immunity from actual conditions if they are to function without nerve-wrecking stress.

It calls for instant clearing of the zones of equipment and material, the reorganization of all bridges, transport, hospital and repair shop zones—this last a factor in maintaining all gear, from re-fitting and recalibering of guns to what the laymen will best comprehend as "garage service" on a vast scale.

To add to this, the fatal decision of the maintenance of the points of egress into the invaded territory. The mechanism of war may change from century to century, but the roads, river beds, valleys are fixed in nature's plan; and their facilities for human employment never cease to be related to them.

The defenders in the present instance have their bases on a fortified line, and the supply zones within the protected territory preceding it. The adversary has deployed in some places through narrow gaps in mountains and through dense forest growth and must keep at all costs extended fighting flanks to cover his lines of communication.

SITUATION CHANGES

In pre-1914 wars, with the air arm an elementary phase of utility, his position as the line stands today would constitute, if once stabilized, a victory. But in view of the passing of the element of initiative and attack to the defender, deployed before a fortified area, the defenders are in a position to exploit the situation at any time. The fury of the attack, therefore, is at most, a tactical opportunity to:

1—Dominate supply lines.

2—Turn a flank during the general encounter battle.

3—Create a situation where an advance may be staged upon a repulse.

It must not be forgotten that the strength and ability of the "forward dash" of mechanized forces will with relative readjustments as to time table and armament parirake of the old time "cavalry sweep" in large units; also that while it gained by destructiveness, it requires its own sources of supply, i.e., parts, petrol, etc., and that the resistance of like weapon power based upon protected fort lines can succeed unless morale fails, meet and defeat it.

The events of the past week shook the morale of the defender nations in various ways. It has been suggested that if military operations were discussed in principle by government leaders or spokesmen, the public would be helped to keep a balanced view. For military reasons there need not be informative as to the actual stage of operations, but to maintain financial and other angles of democratic security, they might well be discussed in order that all thinking men will feel that the aggressor does not enjoy a sole monopoly of the science of war.

INFORMED CO-OPERATION

What response the operations branch of the Allied armies require of their civilian compatriots is an informed co-operative one, sensitive to the demands and exigencies of the tactical employment of all national resources upon the field of war. There will be a greater eagerness to do so if there is a medium of informed opinion. Such a state of mind can only result if the public realizes to any given advance there is a counterstroke.

Further, it would prepare them to comprehend that over several areas the events of last week may be repeated, and that in the realm of the statecraft of the nations at war, one side will be the objective of the attacking power of the other. The defender will be, as things are, the Allied powers.

The theory of the "blitzkrieg"—the furious use of all arms plus reckless disposal of manpower—to win objective within limited time schedules, is having its test. It is new only in that it combines increased fire power with mobility. Its principle is as old as the javelin thrower and the chariot with knifed wheel hubs.

Can it win? That is what is being tested today. One thing is known—that if it fails the results are confusion, congestion, loss of control, internal collapse and by the too early employment of infantry in relation to its advance such losses as to contribute greatly to the disintegration of morale.

Counter-Espionage Is Job Needing Experts Government Here Feels

By GRANT DEXTER
Edmonton Bulletin Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA, June 1.—Since the German invasion of Denmark, Norway and the Low Countries, the government has been swamped by demands for a home guard to deal with fifth column activities.

This demand has been met by the announcement that 12 companies of 250 men each will be recruited. A few days after this announcement was made, the government said that this force would be enlarged. At the same time, the government announced that the R.C.M.P., now 2,450 strong, is being increased, "to such an extent that every eventuality will be taken care of."

The decision to enlarge the R.C. M.P. has no connection with the present demand for a home guard. This decision was made some time ago.

As Ottawa sees it, home defence units are useless in checking sabotage, espionage and the other activities of fifth columnists. This is the job of experts, of men who have been trained for many years and who long ago established their contacts.

WORK SUCCESSFULLY

In Canada this work is done by the R.C.M.P. The force has been doing it with great success for many years. It is being said, today, that the R.C.M.P. feel unable to cope with fifth column activities and have asked for assistance. This, emphatically, is untrue. Perhaps there is nothing the police are more nervous about than that the government will compel them to co-operate with a home guard comprising men, who, to the police, would be the rankest amateurs.

On the point of whether or not the R.C.M.P. believe they are in complete command of the situation, Mr. Lapointe made a statement in the Commons on May 23. He said: "The R.C.M.P. and their secret service are in complete control of the situation, both at present and as it may develop. Persons of enemy origin suspected of Nazi activities have been interned. Persons of potential enemy origin are known and are being closely watched."

He added that only the R.C.M.P. can handle such matters and that to divert able bodied citizens from productive work to deal with matters than can only be handled by the police would be to help the enemy. Mr. Lapointe also said that all precautions have been taken to safeguard public works, communications, transport facilities and other property from sabotage.

HAMPERING WORK

If further evidence is required it will be found in a statement issued by the divisional headquarters of the R.C.M.P. at Montreal on May 28. In this statement the police pointed out that innumerable telephone calls and letters were hampering, not helping, their work.

"We must stress the point," the statement said, "that members of the fifth column would like nothing better than to have us run around, getting nowhere, investigating false reports."

Secret service work, it is pointed out here, can only be done successfully by specialists. And it is largely international in scope. The R.C.M.P. works in the closest co-operation with Scotland Yard and the French secret police. It also works with the U.S. secret police. One reason why the public become anxious is that they seldom hear of what the R.C.M.P. is doing. The work of necessity, is secret service. There is no publicity, no court cases. The explanation is that when the R.C.M.P. pick up enemy saboteurs, as they are doing almost daily, they never let the enemy headquarters know that their agent has been nabbed. On the contrary, they hope, and often it so turns out, that the enemy will continue to send instructions to the agent and thus give invaluable information regarding pending plots and accomplices.

FORESTALL THEM

And it is pointed out that the true measure of success in this work is not to catch saboteurs after they have blown up a vital plant, but to forestall them—as was done in the plot to wreck the smelting plant at Trail.

It seems nonsensical to the experts here that people should think that any number of home guards could help in frustrating the work of the fifth column. Home guards, no doubt, can be used to reinforce the patrols at key points but this is regarded as an inadequate way of dealing with sabotage. The damage will have been done and it will be small comfort to catch the saboteurs.

One other point arises. There is the fear of riots, civil disturbances and so on. The view here, as expressed by Mr. Lapointe on Wednesday afternoon, is that this is a matter of law and order. It is the duty of the municipalities and the provincial government to maintain law and order. If they feel unable to do so, it then becomes their duty to say so. The Dominion government will come to the assistance promptly, with armed troops if need be.

Steady Increase In Advertising In Papers Reported

TORONTO, June 1—A steady increase in advertising in Canadian and United States newspapers in the first quarter of 1940 was reported yesterday by William A. Thompson of New York, speaking before the bureau of advertising section of the Canadian Daily Newspaper Association.

Mr. Thompson, director of the bureau of advertising, American Newspaper Publishers' Association, said newspapers today were themselves proof of a universal hunger for news. There was a tremendous interest in local news and it was for the advertiser to catch the attention of the audience assembled by the editor.

June 13 Is Named Statutory Holiday Ottawa Announces

OTTAWA, June 1.—June 13, the date fixed for official celebration in Canada of King George's birthday, has been declared a statutory holiday, it was learned last night. However, it is expected thousands of Canadians will not participate in the holiday but will continue work in war industries, many of which now are operating seven days a week. Banks and courts will observe the holiday.

To Business, Please

Some of the Opposition members at Ottawa seem to have forgotten there was a general Dominion election two months ago, or who won it. A quartette of their modest number have been trying to reconstruct the Government to which the voters a few weeks ago gave the most emphatic endorsation they have ever given to any administration. In particular these gentlemen want Mr. King to quit the premiership and Mr. Ralston to take over.

The answer to this somewhat impertinent attempt to set aside the decision of the electors came in due time, when Mr. King's colleagues and supporters told the would-be cabinet makers nothing of the kind is going to happen. Which, it may be hoped, will end the filibuster. Parliament has something more important to do than stage demonstrations of political frustration at this juncture; and the quarters from which the proposal came is pretty good evidence that it had a political motive.

All that aside, Mr. Ralston is doing good work as minister of finance, in circumstances where few men have either the ability or the strength to carry on successfully. For what Mr. Ralston is doing, and for what all the other ministers are doing, Mr. King shares the credit, since he chose them and has the last word in approving their plans. It would be a cardinal mistake to shift either of them from the positions they are filling with marked public approval and great credit. Parliament should get on with business.

Side by Side

While one British expeditionary force was being extricated from the Flanders trap, another moved into position along the Somme, to operate with the central French army and bar the road to Paris.

All the enemy has gained by the costly offensive therefore has been a narrow strip of Belgian and French territory and the Channel ports, which he may or may not be able to use effectively as bases for bombing England from the air.

The British army has not been driven out of France. It is still there. Nor has a wedge been driven between the British and French forces. They are fighting side by side on a common front, along a line to which reinforcements and supplies can be brought up as they may be required—in far less time than it must take to move reinforcements and munitions from distant Germany.

The adhesion of the Allies is as close as the physical presence of their troops on the common front suggests. Whatever Berlin may have hoped, what has happened has made plainer than before that their safety lies in unshaken allegiance to each other. Should they separate they would be destroyed in turn. Every intelligent person in Britain and France knows that now beyond any shadow of doubt.

It will be quite useless for Herr Goebbels to resume his gabbing about the British leaving it to the French to do the hard fighting. Flanders, carpeted with German dead, shows how much truth there was in that story. The British troops on the Somme supply advance refutation if the head of the prevarication department should try to revive it.

"Planes, More Planes and More Planes"

British authorities have turned over to the United States the patents on the famous "Merlin" engine, with which Britain's super-fighting planes are equipped. With the patent goes full right to use the engine in planes designed for the Allies and also for United States air fleets.

This means of course that the Allies will get planes built in American factories and equipped with these engines, undoubtedly the best in the world. It is sure to be a condition of the transfer that the delivery of planes to Allied orders is to be speeded up, perhaps given priority.

United States fighting planes are also to be supplied with the same motive power, a fact which Berlin will ponder with uneasy wonder.

It is significant, too, that Hon. C. D. Howe made a trip to New York the other day looking for airplane engines, which Britain can no longer supply under the Air Training plan, and on his return it was announced that Canadian factories are to go full steam ahead in building planes.

What this all comes to very plainly is that the Nazi air supremacy in numbers will not last very many weeks. It has been demonstrated that man for man and plane for plane the Allied airmen have the enemy beaten to a frazzle. Given anything like equal numbers of planes, and with a corresponding output of pilots and observers from the Air Training schools, the Allies will be able to carry air war into Germany and let its people see at close hand what their Fuehrer has been doing in other countries.

Lord Beaverbrook, it may be inferred, is getting into action.

Herr Goebbels was summoned to the Presence to give a literary finish to some "sensational announcement" the Fuehrer is said to have in mind. Maybe Adolf is going to tell the world he has repented of his crimes; and blow his head off to prove it. That is about the only "sensational" announcement he could make, and the only way he could get it believed.

At Vernon an enemy alien, who was interned at the outbreak of war but succeeded in persuading an investigating tribunal he should be restored to freedom, was convicted and fined for being illegally in possession of firearms. He will go back to the internment camp, to the particular satisfaction of people of enemy origin who are honest in their intentions, since it is his kind who bring these under undeserved suspicion.

As predicted, the tent caterpillars have appeared in Edmonton in force, and our shade trees, fruit trees and shrubbery are threatened, more seriously than for many years. Anyone who looks for the invaders will have no trouble finding the nests and the curled leaves which betray their presence. The plague, it is said, will reach the peak in a couple of weeks. There is therefore no time to lose in getting the spray guns into action, and other defensive operations under way.

Current Comment

The Fourth Division

The announcements made in the House of Commons yesterday of the immediate expansion of our armed forces are real evidence of the readjustment of the Canadian military effort to the new needs of the hour. As such they will be widely welcomed. It is as yet premature to assess the ultimate consequences of the German attacks that have now been incessant in the west since May 10. It may be that, by exhausting the Nazi strength, they will shorten the war. But it would be folly at this moment not to face the fact that, as a result of the German successes of the last fortnight, the war may not only be prolonged, but may be more bloody and more costly in every way.

Because of this it is the part of prudent, far-seeing leadership to lay the groundwork now for the provision of more and more men and material. We are now passing through a crisis. Let us not suppose that it will be the last. We must be ready to face the next one, and the next, with reserves of strength ready and equipped to be thrown into the breach. The men now to be recruited will be in this category of reserve probably for some time, but the more training and discipline they receive, the better able they will be to face the emergencies of the future and to maintain the great traditions of the fighting Canadian Corps in the last war.—Winnipeg Free Press.

Tourist Dollars for Us

United States tourists to the number of fifteen or twenty million are expected in Canada this year. With Europe out of the holiday travel picture, Canadian officials look for a minimum increase of $100,000,000 over the tourist revenue of last year, which totalled $275,000,000.

American tourist dollars will fight for us. They will buy the sinews of war. If the tourists spend up to $400,000,000 in Canada this summer, the importance of that expenditure in the Canadian economy is obvious.

The dominion government is appropriating $700,000,000 for the war effort during the fiscal year 1940-41, ending March 31 next. Every American dollar spent in Canada helps us to fill the reservoir of United States exchange to meet war contingencies. Americs can supply warplanes and other essential equipment.

It is good business to encourage our American neighbors to take their vacations in Canada. They will not only enjoy the scenery, the climate and the fishing, but will see something of the war effort we hope to make. The overwhelming majority of them are in sympathy with the Allied cause.

Every American dollar is worth $1.10 in Canada at the present time. We should give tourists their money's worth and a warm welcome. Twenty million satisfied Americans returning to their homes after a good holiday in Canada can help the Allied cause. Their attitude will have a tremendous effect on public opinion in the United States.—Toronto Globe and Mail.

'Ware the Rumor

Mr. Duff Cooper, speaking to the British people, said a well-informed reporter had told him during the day that Premier Reynaud had told the British Senate "only a miracle could save France." Mr. Duff Cooper declared he could not credit the statement and went to the report of the Reynaud speech, where he found this:

"France cannot die. As for me, if I am told tomorrow that only a miracle can save France I would say I believe in miracles because I believe in France."

That was something quite different, of course. As the situation became so desperate that only a miracle could save his country he still would not despair, because France before this has been saved when hope seemed useless, but obviously that time had not then arrived—nor has it yet.

That same misunderstanding of Reynaud's words gained wide circulation in Ottawa, so it is said. For those who heard it, and did not bother checking the newspaper reports, it might well have been the last straw in a jittery day of depressing news.

The public morale can be impaired, and defeatist propaganda circulated, we are quite sure, by the incomplete understanding of news reports given over the radio. A phrase is seized upon, as perhaps from the broadcast summaries of the Reynaud speech, its qualifying phrases are lost or their significance is not realized. And certainly some of the radio commentators in the United States are gloomy and depressing fellows. Many listeners fail to appreciate the fact that such so-called "experts" have nothing more to go on than newspaper reports, that they are merely expressing personal opinions as likely to be proved wrong by events as to be confirmed, and that they are interested in themselves as radio personalities rather than in the objective news.—Ottawa Journal.

The New Awareness

American opinion is changing about the war. There is a new awareness of how close the war is getting to the United States. There is a deeper concern about its outcome.

There is an instinctive feeling that before long the United States will be giving more positive aid to the Allies.

This sentiment is discernible through the Mid-West, typical barometer of national opinion which the Mid-West almost invariably is. This is grassroots sentiment, not merely editorial page and Pullman car say-so. This is the sentiment expressed by every kind and category of people in and from a dozen states with whom a travelling correspondent would have occasion to mingle.

This rapid and radical change in opinion does not mean that the American people have suddenly gone pro-war. It does not mean that keeping out of war is a discarded hope; it is an earnest hope but it no longer the all-embracing sum-total of public reaction on foreign policy. The fact is that America is not moving nearer to the war but the war is moving nearer to America, and the result is that people everywhere are frankly, realistically, unhesitatingly reappraising their attitude. This appraisal represents a picture different from what I saw when visiting this part of the country only a month ago.

What is the net effect of this changing public opinion? It is premature to attempt a final answer, but it is apparent that the nation is horrified at the prospect of a Hitler victory; it is preparing to resist a Hitler victory; it is beginning to feel that American freedom and American security are bound up with an Allied success; it is increasingly open-minded; it is considerably receptive to the idea of giving quick and substantial assistance to Britain and France, and although them to the invaded and terrorized little democracies of Europe—industrial, financial, and technical assistance. If this be unneutral, people are beginning to feel it is pro-American. They recoil at the possibility of sending any armed force to Europe.

This new crystallizing of national opinion is, without pressure and without propaganda, giving to the government the substance and spirit of national unity on all agreed objectives of foreign policy. The force of events which compelled the President's $1,200,000,000 emergency defense program has brought into being a spontaneous public opinion which is united behind it, which is insuring that American defense will not be permitted to be a partisan issue.

The President is finding that he is neither having to shop nor to plead for national unity. He is finding national unity looking for responsible Presidential leadership—a unity which is capable of showing that a great democracy can move speedily to perfect its defense and capable of supporting the use of its defense in the national interest.—J. Roscoe Drummond in The Christian Science Monitor.

No matter what the creed, where the land, or what the era, the best in the world is not defeated by the worst.—Evangeline Booth, commander of the English Salvation Army.

The First Sea Lord

Stirring events at sea and the epic evacuation of the Allied army from Flanders under the protecting guns of the fleet, have turned the attention of the world to the British Navy. This short sketch introduces to the public the man at the helm, Admiral of the Fleet Sir Dudley Pound.—EDITOR.

The First Sea Lord, Admiral of the Fleet Sir Dudley Pound, is unquestionably a man of the sea. Today his duty keeps him mainly to the Admiralty, but his love of the sea and ships remains deep and abiding.

He has travelled far since that great day in 1891 when he joined the Navy as a cadet. Two years later he was a midshipman on the China Station. At 19 he was a sub-lieutenant and was continuously afloat, except for his qualifying course for torpedo lieutenant, until 1909.

Then he had two years in the Admiralty's Torpedo Department before joining H.M.S. Superb as executive officer. While in this ship he made an attempt to save three men from suffocation and received the Royal Humane Society's medal for his gallantry.

In 1914, when war came, he was executive officer in the battleship "St. Vincent." At the end of that year he was made a captain, a young captain at 37. In the Jutland battle he was in command of the battleship "Colossus" and was mentioned in despatches.

July, 1917, saw him back at the Admiralty as a Director of Operations. It was at this time that the convoy system was instituted on a large scale.

He was with Sir Roger Keyes in H.M.S. Hood in 1920 and later in that year commanded H.M.S. Repulse. Another spell at the Admiralty as Director of Plans and then for two years he was Chief of Staff to Sir Roger Keyes, commander-in-chief of the Mediterranean Station. During this period he reached the rank of Rear-Admiral.

So the story of a glowing career continues. From 1927 to 1929 Assistant Chief of the Naval Staff at the Admiralty, followed by a command of the Battle Cruiser Squadron and promotion to Vice-Admiral. From 1932 to 1935 Second Sea Lord and Chief of Naval Personnel.

In January, 1935, he was promoted to Admiral and later nominated to the Mediterranean command. As a result of the Abyssinian crisis, at his own request, he was appointed instead as Temporary Chief of Staff to Admiral Sir William Fisher, whom he would otherwise have relieved as Commander-in-Chief. He ultimately succeeded him in March, 1936, and commanded the Mediterranean Fleet for the remaining months of the crisis and throughout the whole of the period of the Spanish Civil War.

In June, 1939, Sir Dudley took up his present post and later achieved the highest naval rank, Admiral of the Fleet.

With such a chief it is not astonishing that the Royal Navy has a world-wide reputation for efficiency. Sir Dudley works hard himself and has worked his equipment and men hard, too. But always he has shown a keen interest in the welfare of his personnel.

Today he allows himself four or five hours' sleep a day. He enjoys a daily walk if he can get it, and a round of golf occasionally he manages to get away for a few hours' shooting, mostly at dawn.

A perfect host, always keen to see that every social gathering in his ship was a success. The father of two sons and a daughter and at 62 a very fit and active man.

CLINGS AND SINGS

"From one who has suffered, and trusts, and clings and sings. In His Name." So runs the subscription in a letter on my desk. The words might end the majority of messages from readers of these Meditations.

For in the school of varied suffering, the lessons of the heart and communion have been learned. God means most to those who have gone down into dark valleys with Him. His fellowship is most real to those who have known the loneliness of sorrow and adversity. And "those who trust Him wholly, find Him wholly true."

To cling may seem a necessity; to sing while clinging is one of the faith-filled soul's luxuries and rewards.

In the wide fellowship of suffering, we turn to Thee, our Lord, to pray that our faith may fail not. Amen.

Read Job 13:1-16.

A Slogan Plea

Editor, Bulletin:

"Enlist, now. Get your name on God's book either for actual warfare or moral support."

We are witnessing the ruthless onslaught of a mighty foe, who relies on the power of destruction and satanic trickery, ignoring entirely the power of God and what brotherly love means.

Is it not, therefore, a warning to all who are opposed to these abominations, to see to it, "while there is yet time," that God at last is given a chance to develop His Divine Plan, and not follow so much our own desires. Remember, God cannot manifest without man. Man cannot manifest without God.

All people and nations, who are opposed to the idea that "might is right," are God's battleaxes. It is predicted in the Bible that when the "beast" finally shows himself to be, what he really is that "All the Powers of Hell" shall be let loose for a period and, that for a time, there will be great tribulation and sorrow, but, that ultimately the "beast," "Satan" shall be utterly crushed.

It looks as if we are at that period now. It is clearly shown us that this war is not just "Germany versus the Allies." It is "God versus Satan." That means, if we are to be His battleaxes, we must brace ourselves for the struggle and not be discouraged by reverses or seeming success of Satanic power, knowing full well, the ultimate triumph of God's Divine Plan.

Our sole hope, therefore, is to turn truly to God, not just in lip service but by our actions and words show that we do recognize Him as the supreme and only God and place ourselves entirely in His guidance. Cheer up, ye battleaxes and all those who believe in God's promises. Have a stout heart. Stand firm. Be ready to strike hard and the world with yet be a beautiful place to live in.

Seeing that is our desire, then let us all turn to God, thereby helping Him to fully develop His predordained divine plan.

Therefore, "Enlist now. Get your name on God's book, either for actual warfare or for some form of moral support."

McCoy Health Service

It has been estimated that half of the adult population either has already had Athlete's foot, or has it at the present time.

This skin disease is due to a fungus, or microscopic plant. The name "Ringworm of the Foot" has been rightly given to it, but this conveys a wrong impression since its leads many people to believe that it is due to a worm which burrows beneath the skin, whereas the true cause is a plant growth.

It most cases it affects chiefly the outer layers of the skin and does not go very deeply, although there are exceptions. While ordinarily not a serious condition, it compels attention because it affects so many people and ranks as one of the most common of all skin disorders.

The fungus which causes the disease is generally distributed in gymnasiums, locker rooms, around swimming pools, and among the tiles of public showers and of the runways leading to the showers. The fungus is picked up by those frequenting such places, who expose the bare feet. After the disease develops, the new patients may become carriers and may innocently carry the skin trouble to family members at home, using the same bathroom.

Athlete's Foot begins as an itchy spot between the toes. The skin becomes extremely moist and soft and turns white. The top layer then peels off, leaving a reddened surface. The odor is unpleasant. Cracks may form which are resistant to healing.

In a few exceptional cases, the disease will clear up itself, but the wisest plan is to treat it. The accepted treatment is to apply a preparation known to kill the fungus growth. Instead of relying upon the advice of friends regarding the preparation to be used, it is better to rely upon your doctor's advice. If you tell ten of your friends you have this trouble, you will probably receive advice to use ten different remedies, many of which would prove useless.

Be persistent in treatment and make sure that all the affected patches are cleared up, as if one spot remains, it will possibly be enough to start the trouble all over again. Remember, it is likely that if you continue to wear the same shoes and stockings, you will again pick up the fungus from them. After treatment, change to a clean pair and give away or destroy all shoes, if you have them. All hose should be boiled, if possible, and woolen hose sent to the cleaners. Silk and rayon hosiery should be well washed with plenty of soap and dried in the sun. Men generally find it a good idea to purchase two or three pairs of cotton hose, which will stand boiling, and to wear these in rotation until the feet are healed.

An article on "Athlete's Foot" will be sent to all readers desiring it who forward their requests to The McCoy Health Service. Please enclose a large, self-addressed envelope and 3 cents in stamps.

Address all letters to The McCoy Health Service, The McCoy Building, 116 West 8th Street, Los Angeles, California.

Sunshine Shafts

"Are you yawning?"

"No. I'm giving a silent Indian war-whoop."

Agent: "Sir, I have something here which will make you popular, make your life happier, and bring you a host of new friends."

Student: "I'll take a quart."

"Once a man is married," says a writer, "he's at the end of his troubles."

But which end?

An old Highland soldier got into a train travelling to Inverness. Rather unsteadily he sat down beside a Salvation Army officer. For some time he gazed at the officer's uniform with profound concentration. At last he broke into speech.

"What's yer regiment, mane? canna mak' it out."

The officer replied: "I am a soldier of Heaven. I go to Inverness to fight the Devil, to Aberdeen to fight him again, and then to Dundee, Edinburgh and Newcastle."

"That's right, man," said the other. "Keep on beating the blighter noo."

Lawyer: You say you saw the man stabbed in the hay field with a fork. What kind of a fork?

Witness: Well, did ye ever see a tuning fork or an oyster fork in a hay field?

Judge: "You heard the altercation between the accused and his wife?"

Witness: "Yes, your Honour."

Judge: "What did the accused say?"

Witness: "He listened, your Honour."

A certain celebrated doctor hated to pay his bills, and got out of doing so whenever he could. One day the doctor employed a workman to mend some pavement just outside of his house. Afterwards he exclaimed:

"Why, you rascal! Do you expect to be paid for such a piece of work? Why, you have spoiled my pavement and then covered it over with earth to hide the bad work!"

The workman winked knowingly. "Doctor," he retorted, "my mine is not the only bad work the earth hides."

On The Record

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

A Nation Of Suckers

WASHINGTON, May 23.—(By wireless and air mail.)—The way to deal with the "fifth column" in the United States is to know what its agents are doing and stop their doing it. This is not impossible, but it demands planned legislation and systematic action. Incidentally, the less publicity it receives and the less hysteria that accompanies it, the more successful it will be.

• • •

The proposal of congress, for instance, that Communists and members of Nazi bunds should be barred from relief rolls is useless and will lead to unjust persecution. As long as the Communist party is a legal body in the United States, with its own press and its candidates for office, there is neither a legal nor a logical ground why its members should not receive relief. It is preposterous that the Communist party may offer a candidate for the presidency of the United States, while some indigent workman who may once have joined it is thrust out to starve.

The same holds true of the German-American Bund, which organizes and recruits members openly.

Who, one wonders, is to decide whether a person on relief is a Communist? Are the relief administrations to turn themselves into sleuths and spy into the political connection of all their clients?

• • •

Hitler and Stalin long ago began an undeclared war on the United States, and we have been blandly and idiotically assisting them to wage it. We have been policing and protecting their activities on the ground of affording democratic support of the right of free speech.

Actually, the Communist party, the German-American Bund and hundreds of other organizations and committees have no more claim to the right of free speech than the parachutists who invaded Holland could claim the right of free assembly.

The Swiss, who have the toughest, hardest, truest and most realistic democracy in Europe, the only European democracy that has known from the beginning how to deal with the "fifth column." Long ago it declared the Communist party illegal, suppressed all of its publications and deported all aliens who had been connected with it. When an incipient Nazi movement began to grow, Switzerland passed a law for the defense of democratic institutions, making it a crime to hold up to ridicule or contempt the institutions of democracy.

And, observing that the Nazis worked most effectively by spreading anti-Semitism, they made it a crime to conduct a systematic campaign against a race, religion or nationality. With this simple law they drove the Nazis and their fellow travelers out of the country. And such a simple law, rigorously enforced, we could stop a large part of the Nazi activities tomorrow.

• • •

The Nazi "fifth column," which I have observed for years at home and have seen again this spring in Europe, follows a technique similar to the military tactics now pursued against opponents in Europe. The military tactic is to send numerous speedy, highly motorized columns, like the fingers of a hand, to blow up communications, capture radio stations and confuse armies, and then lighten the fingers into a crushing fist while the main body of troops follows. This is exactly the propaganda and organization technique.

The Nazi "fifth column" is not the German-American Bund. That is only one finger—the battalion that organizes Germans in America. It has another quite as important column, aimed almost wholly at winning the support of Anglo-Saxons, particularly the more ignorant and provincial. The offensive gathers together the Ku Klux spirit wherever it can be found and devotes itself almost exclusively to spreading anti-Semitism in the most vicious way.

The Pelleys, Edmondsons, James Trues and innumerable others are, consciously or unconsciously, the shock troops of this wing of the "fifth column," and they are plentifully supplied with propaganda material directly from Germany. It does no good to extract individuals from this group. The propaganda must be stopped by some covering law. You cannot incite against Jews in Switzerland, or conduct a campaign to deprive them of their legal rights as Swiss citizens, and that law shuts up a great part of the propaganda.

Another finger of the hand, reaching into the heart of our institutions, is made up of Irish who have been incited against Great Britain —not against the British government but against the British people. The anti-English and anti-Protestant campaigns find support in some circles of the Roman Catholic church, and for the Nazis this is wonderful, because it in turn produces an anti-Catholic reaction.

The Nazis, time and again, have used the very people whom they later most coldly destroyed. They have used the Irish Republican Army, for instance, but if they ever conquer Great Britain, Ireland and England will be another Poland. They already have a plan for crowding English Catholics into Ireland while they deport English Protestants to the dominions.

• • •

The followers of Stalin play Hitler's game abroad by conspiracy to sabotage armament, disrupt industries by strikes, halt transportation of essential war materials and spread pacifism.

Outside of Germany, Russia, Czecho-Slovakia, Poland, Denmark, Norway, Holland, Belgium, France and Great Britain, the Nazis and Communists are the most energetic pacifists and spreaders of brotherly love. No organ in America is more anxious to keep us out of war than "The Free American and Deutscher Weckruf und Beobachter" — the Goebbels sheet published in New York—unless it be "The Daily Worker" or "The New Masses," with their winsome thesis that Finland attacked Soviet Russia and that every one who protests that atrocity is a warmonger.

When the story of this war is finally written we shall find out the role that Communazi sabotage in industries, transportation and in the army itself in France and in Great Britain. That is, we shall unless the history of this war is written wholly by the Nazis. And even then we shall find out, because Hitler is nothing if not candid. He is engaged, I hear, on a sequel to "Mein Kampf," entitled "How I Did It." No doubt he will recount with humor how he gave the world a blueprint of his plans and nevertheless found it astonished, surprised, indignant and appalled at every step he took.

The democracies have been played for suckers by the most criminal mind since Nero and Caligula—and they are still being played.

There is another column in our great industries, and the line taken with them is that Nazism represents the logical quintessence of industrial—as opposed to financial—capitalism like Britain but more efficient; the system of the future, which will reward the strong who help impose the pattern.

There is an appeal to the fuehrers as well as to those who are to be led, and the former are promised the elimination of the troublemakers the Pelleys, for example—once they have helped mobilize and deliver the masses of nitwits.

The "fifth column" will make itself most felt in time of crisis, and in this crisis, particularly to prevent our democratic republic from taking any clear-cut action. On the contrary, it attempts to keep us running around in circles.

The Nazi denounces the Communists to the Dies committee, and the very sleuths following the Reds put into the hands of the Communists, while those following the Communists fall prey to the Nazis. From this experience we should learn that this is all a blind.

A large part of the propaganda activities streams from the German embassy and consulates, and it might be well to check up on the size and activities of these bodies and limit both by law. The staff is constantly augmented. It would be interesting to know, for instance, the precise role being played by Dr. Westrick, who, when I left New York two months ago, was ensconced in an uptown hotel, in some camouflaged commercial connection with the German embassy. Dr. Westrick was associated during the last war with Dr. Heinrich Albert, who was head of the German propaganda machine in the United States.

The activities of our Italian brethren need some watching, too, and will need even more in a very short time.

• • •

The business of getting spies, saboteurs and directed agents belongs rightly to the department of justice, which could be greatly assisted by the immigration and state departments — particularly the latter—if our consular agents abroad were given proper authority to investigate the people to whom they grant visas. As things are now they have no authority whatsoever.

The foreign agents who continue to stream into the United States on quota and visitor visas, particularly the latter, and sometimes as pretended refugees, are exactly those who have the least difficulty in producing bank balances as affidavits of support.

But to stop the large-scale propaganda from "fifth columns" we need legislation — legislation that forbids the existence of any political body which is in direction from any foreign power. With such a law we can suppress the Communist party and all its publications without starting a Red-baiting campaign, that is likely to end with every honest radical being afraid for his life. With such a law we can suppress the German-American Bund, instead merely of riding Mr. Kuhn to jail.

We should stop the inciting of race against race and religion against religion by legislation similar to the Swiss.

We should limit the number of members of foreign embassies, consulates and missions.

And we should bear clearly in mind, at all times, that we are less threatened by war in any sense if which we have previously known it than by an international criminal conspiracy that happens also to be armed.

FIVE CANUCK AIRMEN GIVEN DECORATIONS

LONDON, June 1—Courage and devotion to duty shown by five Canadian airmen were recognized last night in the air ministry honors list by the awards of distinguished flying crosses to four of them and an M.B.E. to the fifth.

They are:

M.B.E.—Pilot-Officer Estelles Arthur Wilkenamp, Nemen, Sask., who is missing, believed killed in action.

D.F.C.—Pilot-Officer Wm. Oliver Digby Tweddell, Ottawa.

D.F.C.—Flying-Officer Wm Henry Nelson, Montreal.

D.F.C.—Flying-Officer John Phillip Dyer, Minnedosa, Man.

D.F.C.—Flight-Lieut. Peter Alexander Gilchrist, Weyburn, Sask.

The announcement of the honor to Pilot-Officer Wickenkamp said the King "Has been graciously pleased to give orders that the aviator be appointed to "Be an additional member of the military division of the said most excellent order 'of the British Empire)" to be dated from April 6, 1940.

"For gallantry, promptitude and disregard of his own life when an aircraft in which he was second pilot crashed and burst into flames," the citation said.

Defence Minister Says Eire Now In Theatre Of War

DUBLIN, June 1.—Defence Minister Oscar Traynor broadcast a call last night for volunteers for the army and all other branches of Eire's defence forces. "This island now is actually within the theatre of operations of the war," he warned. "The airplane and submarine destroy our historical immunity."

Liner Roosevelt Reaches Galway

GALWAY, Eire, June 1. — The United States liner President Roosevelt arrived here last night to take more than 1,200 Americans home. The ship anchored about two miles off shore to avoid the comparatively shallow water in the harbor.

Show New Models

F. W. MILLS, manager of Mills Motors who is gridefully displaying the new Delux-Tone Studebakers. The five new two-tone exteriors, and the contrasting color interiors, and wheel finishes set these cars out as something new in motor car styling.

STUDEBAKER HAS CARS IN DELUX-TONE

Mills Motors Ltd. Displays Latest Models; Fine Upholstery

"Studebaker swings into spring with a line of colorful, new Delux-tone models." Such was the enthusiastic announcement made yesterday by Frank Mills of Mills Motors Ltd. Motorists are invited to inspect the new cars, just received from the factory.

Inside as well as out the new Delux-tone models reflect the spirit of the season. They are available in the Studebaker President, Commander and the sensational new Dictator Champion.

The eye-arresting exteriors, a combination of varying hues of the same basic color, enhance the flowing contours designed by Raymond Loewy. Five separate and distinct color combinations feature dark lower body with lighter shades of the same hue on the entire top above the belt line. The various ensembles are highlighted by steel disc wheels of contrasting bright colors.

UPHOLSTERY

New interiors carry out the harmony of the two-tone body treatment. Cleverly tailored two-tone upholstery is offered in one of three color combinations depending upon the exterior scheme selected. Broadcloth fabrics of light and dark tones of the same hue color units in an unusually attractive contrasts. Interior compartment rugs match the darker upholstery color. The instrument panel two-tone styling is set off by strips of gleaming chromium.

Window garnish mouldings adhere to the modern two-tone styling. Even the ivory colored deluxe phantom steering wheel rim adds its part in the color plan. While sidewall tires, which are standard equipment on Delux-tone Commanders and Presidents, add considerably to the attractiveness of the new cars.

REGULAR PRODUCTION

According to Mr. Mills the new Delux-tone Studebakers are in regular production although they have every appearance of custom built models.

A wide selection of Studebaker Champion models are available. There is the custom model, the deluxe custom model which has the interior two-tone treatment, and the Delux-tone Champion, which has the two-tone combination both inside and out.

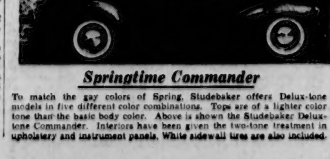

Possible Helium Gas Deposits Are To Be Analyzed

CALGARY, June 1.—Efforts will be made to analyse non-inflammable gas, discovered at the bottom of the Standard Oil Company of British Columbia well in the Steveville structure, 100 miles east of Calgary, to determine whether the gas has any value, an official of the Alberta mines department said here Thursday.

Company officials said they believed the gas was either nitrogen or carbon dioxide but oilmen speculated on the possibility it may be helium which would give Alberta the first helium gas well in the British Empire.

Red Paper Heads On Trial In Fall

WINNIPEG, June 1.—John Weir and William A. Tuomi, editor and bookkeeper respectively, of the Communist weekly newspaper, Mid-West Clarion, were committed by Magistrate R. B. Graham for trial before a judge and jury at the fall assizes.

Springtime Commander

To match the gay colors of Spring, Studebaker offers Delux-tone models in five different color combinations. Tops are of a lighter color tone than the basic body color. Above is shown the Studebaker Deluxtone Commander. Interiors have been given the two-tone treatment in upholstery and instrument panels. While sidewall tires are also included.

Veto Salary Cut

LONDON, June 1—Shareholders of the Hudson's Bay Company at their annual meeting yesterday rejected by a vote of 22 to 16 a resolution to reduce the salary of P. Ashley Cooper, governor of the company, from £5,000 ($22,250) to £1,000 ($4,450).

British Patents On Plane Engine Are Given To U.S.

ASHINGTON, June 1.—Britain turned the patents on its great airplane engine over to the United States Thursday to facilitate production for the American and Allied air fleets.

The announcement was made by Dr. George Jackson Mead, aircraft adviser to treasury secretary Henry Morgenthau.

Mead said the British gave the United States government full rights to use its and dedicated manner the patents to its famed "Merlin"— a 12-cylinder, liquid-cooled Rolls-Royce motor in engine powering British "Defiants," "Spitfires," "Hurricanes" and other speedy ships.

Engineers' Meet

VANCOUVER, June 1—Mexico City was named as the 1941 convention spot for the International Western Union of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers yesterday, as the 12th four-day meeting here drew to a close.

PROVINCIAL BRIEFS

PUPILS RECEIVE SCHOOL AWARDS AT VEGREVILLE

VEGREVILLE

Attended by more than 300 persons, the annual Vegreville school "At Home" and presentation of prizes and class pins was held in the Armories Friday night. Hosts for the occasion were the public school board and the staff and students of the intermediate and high schools.

The I. O. D. E. prize for general proficiency was presented to Billy Hayhurst, the I. O. F. prize for English to Margaret Urechcki, the Women's Institute prize for social studies to Alice Carter, the I. O. D. E. prize for mathematics to John Stonehocker, the Women's Institute prize for commercial to Ethel Wilson, the H. Olyan prize for science to Pat Callahan, and the Kinsmen prizes for grade nine students to Margaret Yule and Miriam Weners.

The following students were awarded class pins: Grade IX—Edith Cardiff, Mike Chmilar, John Isaenko, Jeanette Kostashuk, Naphtali Olyan, Stanley Porter, Betty Third, Miriam Wener and Margaret Yule. Grade X—Nancy Bartman, Eleanor Cardiff, Polly Saskenko, Elsie Mandruk and Nade Muzyka. Grade XI—Billy Hayhurst, Helen Ferguson, Elsie McLean, Catherine Samoil and Alice Yahnitzki. Grade XII—Cecile Aucoin, Gerry Broadrib, Pat Callahan, Margaret Crockel, Rudy Dutka and John Stonehocker.

Kenneth Spies was awarded the Horton trophy as winner of the school festival.

Main speakers of the evening were H. E. Balfour, inspector of high schools, and John Stonehocker, class valedictorian. Presentation of jackets to the Vegreville junior hockey team, Alberta Junior "B" champions, was made by F. W. Laing.

Dr. R. M. Reid, chairman of the school board, presided.

The cavalry unit of the U.S. army at Fort Russell, Texas, has been motorized. This was the first and most famous cavalry unit in the United States.

LEDUC

Seeding in the district is almost completed. With the ample supply of moisture in the form of thunder showers during the last two nights the growth resembles that of a hotbed.

Walter Simpson, Jordan Hill, one of the pioneers, passed away yesterday.

Three new councillors for the town of Leduc were elected by acclamation on Monday: Norman Wilkinson until February, 1943; C. A. Reynar until February, 1942, and A. N. Loggin until February, 1941.

Nels A. Saunders, Leduc, died at his residence on May 24 at the age of 87 years. He was born in Sweden and came to Alberta 40 years ago.

Demolition of the Royal bank building which was purchased by S. B. Reid a few weeks ago, commenced on Tuesday. Mr. Reid intends to use the material to enlarge the Leduc hotel.

At a meeting of the board of health on Tuesday morning, Dr. M. A. S. Treadgold reported that Leduc was exceptionally healthy as far as contagious diseases were concerned, there being only four cases of measles and two of small pox reported in the past 12 months.

RED DEER

The Red Deer public school board has been busy this week discussing plans for the addition, intended as school to be built here this summer. F. H. MacDonald, of MacDonald & MacDonald, Edmonton, the board's architects, has discussed the plans with the board and final approval has been given to them. Tenders are being advertised for and must be in the hands of S. Pamely, secretary-treasurer of the board at Red Deer, not later than 12 o'clock noon on Thursday, June 6.

PIBROCH

The pupils of the Pibroch school were successful in winning first place in the track meet held last week at Westlock, as well as three classes winning banners. The following pupils were winners of cresta: Florence Rimmer, June Baker, Philip Gamble, Walter Baker.

KILLAM

The Killam high school students acted hosts to about 150 high school students from Hardisty, Lougheed, Sedgewick, Strome, Daysland and Bawlf, Friday evening. Miss Georgina Ruzicka was in charge of arrangements.

CALMAR

Downpour Of Hail And Rain Deluges Calmar District

Severe electrical storms and heavy downpour of hail and rain have visited Calmar and vicinity the past few days. Farmers, who were beginning to complain of the dryness of the soil, appear satisfied. The majority of seeding is completed in the district.

Calmar sports day is to be held on Wednesday, June 19.

DAYSLAND

A jolly group of young people of the Y.P.S. of the Dayslend United church gathered about a campfire on the farm of C. M. Mosley, two miles south of town, on Wednesday. It was the closing meeting of the season and was in the form of a farewell to Miss Elsie Dick, one of their most valued associates, prior to her approaching marriage. Rev. C. E. Rogers and Metro Melnyk, president of the Y.P.S. spoke appreciatively of Miss Dick's work.

SPRUCE GROVE

The Spruce Grove basketball girls defeated the Stony Plain seniors 34-27 in a league game played here recently. Helen Callihan was high scorer for the winners with 14 points while Iris Stein made 12 points. The leading scorer for Stony Plain was M. Gannon with 12 points. Mr. J. P. Shropshire was referee.

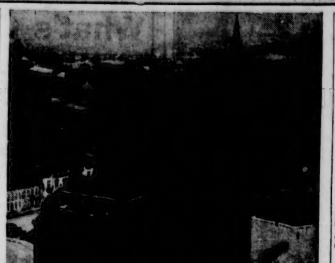

FAUST

The first and only forest fire of the season in the Lesser Slave Lake forest reserve, which assumed proportions straight south of Faust that threatened to be more than 40 men could get under control, was extinguished by a heavy rain last week. Another all-day rain Friday precluded all possibility of any substance, smouldering unnoticed, starting a blaze again later.

LAVOY

The Lavoy field meet, scheduled for Friday, May 31, has been postponed until Monday, June 3 on account of rain and the inability of country schools to attend.

The mayor and councillors of the town of Lavoy have decided to proclaim Monday, June 3 as a civic holiday for Lavoy. Places of business will be closed for the day to enable merchants and employees to attend the annual field meet.

View Of Calais, French Port

Here is a view of Calais, French port on the English channel, which is threatened by the onrushing German army. Calais is opposite Dover, England, and is a very vital port.

PONOKA

Rev. Geo. D. Young, pastor of the Ponoka United church for the past four years, has accepted an appointment with the auxiliary forces of the Royal Canadian Air Force to do special work under direction of the Y.M.C.A. Mr. Young will leave late in June for eastern Canada.

Parents' Day was observed in the Ponoka school recently. Exhibits from all departments, including handicrafts, photography and dramatics, were arranged.

Dr. McNally, deputy minister of education, was the guest speaker at the chamber of commerce luncheon held recently.

OYEN

Mr. Arneson, jr., of Oyen had a narrow escape when he fell under a tiller disc this week. He was only slightly cut when the machine passed over his body. He fell between the wheel of the machine and an outside disc. Had he fallen in any other position, he would have received very serious injuries which might have proved fatal.

SYLVAN LAKE

Empire Day exercises were carried on at Sylvan Lake school on Thursday and it was also the occasion of presentation of prizes from the I.O.D.E.

Pupils of Miss Lily Cuendet, A.T.C.M., gave a fine recital on Tuesday evening at Memorial Presbyterian church. Kuri Traschel, visiting artist, gave two cello solos.

CROSSFIELD

At an open meeting of the Crossfield branch of the Canadian Legion, held in the fire hall on Thursday evening, May 30, it was decided to organize a voluntary Home Guard in this district to co-operate with the R.C.M.P. Recruiting is not restricted to members of the Legion and veterans, but is open to any man in the district caring to enlist for such service.

GRANDE PRAIRIE

W. R. Walling of the DeBolt district was found dead in bed by a neighbor, O. Nielson, on Sunday afternoon. A coroner's investigation ascribed the death as due to natural causes. The deceased man was 60 years of age and had farmed in the district since 1928.

FLEEING NAZI TROOPS REACH CITY OF BODO

STOCKHOLM, June 1—German troops shoved into Bodo, Norway, 118 miles southwest of Narvik, and end of the road north, yesterday, after bombing its defenders out of town.

(In a communique dated "Somewhere in Norway," Norwegian army headquarters announced capture of several hundred Germans driven east from Narvik and said others fled in civilian clothes.)

A Norwegian spokesman said Bodo was abandoned after systematic bombing which "Almost wiped the city off the map." Norwegian soldiers fell back into the roadless mountains north of the city to block any attempt to break through toward Narvik by land.

Swedish newspapers told of Allied and German wounded being brought to the Swedish frontier opposite Narvik in railroad handcars. They also said one hospital train made up at the border carried 162 wounded—most of them Germans.

Victorious R.A.F. Pilots Tell Of Triumph In Air While Badly Out-numbered

By DREW MIDDLETON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WITH ROYAL AIR FORCE Command, somewhere in England, June 1.—A dozen British fliers told yesterday how in a head-filled sky over Dunkerque they shot down 13 German planes although outnumbered 80 to 21. They lost one plane.

Some of the victorious British pilots and their machine gunners belong to a squadron which in four days was credited with downing 33 German planes.

The men in this noted squadron maintain that Britain's new two-man, four-gun fighter plane—the Defiant—is a top-notch craft of great destructive power.

GETS EIGHT ONE DAY

One of the youthful pilots, called "Cookie," shot down eight German planes last Wednesday. He got another Thursday.

The job of these pilots for the last few days has been to protect the road of fire to the sea through which the Allied forces in Flanders have withdrawn to the English channel.

Discussing the technical differences in British planes, "Cookie" recounted a successful air battle in which the Germans lost 38 planes while engaging British fighting from power-driven turret ships.

"Those Jerries don't seem to be able to tell us from Hurricanes," said "Cookie" (Hurricanes fire forward).

"They come along side us, or as we say, 'on the beam,' and the gunner lets go.

"It was like knocking apples off a tree."

NOT UNUSUAL ODDS

Yesterday's battle of the 21 against 80 was little more unequal than most of the engagements fought in the air during the last three weeks.

The conflict began when the 21 British planes sought and found the German squadron of 40 Heinkel bombers that had been harassing ground troops.

"Just after we found them," a pilot said, "we were attacked from above by 40 more German planes, Messerschmitts, the best plane they have.

"In the running battle which spread along the coast we shot down 12 enemy planes. They fell in flames. We saw three more wobble and spin out of line.

"We didn't chase them. You don't in this war."

The fliers related their experiences at their base, where, 10 minutes after they returned from patrol duty over Dunkerque, they were sipping tea and lolling in deck chairs.

GERMANS LIKE ODDS

One pilot remarked that "Jerry never goes for us unless he's got bloody good odds in his favor."

He added:

"I think we are knocking down five for every one we lose, putting two out of action for every one their factories can produce."

The pilot who made that statement is a senior officer, holder of several medals and citations.

The officer emphasized that single combat "business" is avoided as much as possible.

"We fly in box formation," he explained, "and heaven help the man who loses it.

"I call the youngsters back when they stray. It might be one of Jerry's decoys he's chasing. They're good at that."

"Our ships are better armored," he said, "our ships are more manoeuvrable. Whether it's nature or training, when we see Jerry we attack. When he sees us, he counts us before he fights. But we need more ships."

The base at which the airmen told their stories is referred to jokingly as "The half-way house between life and death."

Three thousand planes have been serviced and refuelled at this base in the last three weeks. The plane crews wear yellow life jackets which they call "Mae Wests."

DELIVERY U. S. PLANES TO BE WELL GUARDED

HOULTON, Me., June 1.—A strict military watch was placed last night over a narrow segment of the Maine-New Brunswick border, across which a United States airplane manufacturer expects soon to deliver 38 planes to the dominion government.

The air fleet was expected to arrive here today after a refuelling stop at coastal Portland, on the 600-mile New York-to-Houlton flight.

A cordon of Royal Canadian Mounted Police and militia from Woodstock, N.B., were assigned to patrol the Canadian highway over which the planes will pass to an unnamed New Brunswick flying field.

On the United States side, state police and immigration officers were placed on the alert.

A Bulletin Short Story Complete On This Page Every Saturday

By Charles J. McGuirk

SITTING at breakfast in the cool kitchen of the Graeme farmhouse that morning in early August with Granny and Uncle Tom and Aunt Nancy, Diane Graeme tried to think of an argument which would persuade her father and mother to allow her to live on the farm all the time instead of spending most of the year with them in their sumptuous New York apartment.

Diane was a tall, grave child of 9 and in her short gingham dress her arms and legs looked absurdly thin until you found her face. Then you forgot all about them. It was pale even under a two-months' tan. Her dark chestnut hair had been touched by the sun. Her short turned-up nose should have given her a pert expression but her eyes overshadowed it. They were brown and warm, puzzled and a little hurt. Her tight little mouth was sensitive.

Pecking daintily at a soft-boiled egg, she thought of all the good reasons why she should live here all the time. Well, a Graeme had always lived here ever since Silas, the founder of the family, had bought it from the Indians nearly three hundred years ago. Then, Uncle Tom and Aunt Nancy needed a little girl to take the place of Betty, the daughter they had lost four years ago. She had been just Diane's age. And besides, Granny was always saying that it was nice to have a little girl around the house.

But her best argument was one she wouldn't dare to use. It was that her father and mother didn't really want her as much as Granny and Uncle Tom and Aunt Nancy did. Oh, maybe her daddy did, almost. But she was pretty sure her mother didn't. She had found that out two months ago, the morning she was leaving home to come out here.

That morning, she found her father standing, legs apart, a highball in his hand, in the living-room of their Park Avenue apartment. As she faced him, dressed for the journey in front of Caroline, the maid, she could smell the tobacco smoke hidden in his tweeds and she wanted to feel their roughness as his arms went about her. But he made no move.

"Oh, there you are," he smiled vaguely and set his glass too carefully upon the table. Then he opened his arms and she walked stiffly into them to be greeted with an aromatic kiss on the cheek. She wanted to hug and kiss him hard but his eyes were far away. "Have a nice summer, Baby," he said but she suspected he wasn't thinking of her. He proved it immediately.

"Is your mother up?" he asked. She shook her head. She was on her way to take leave of her and she was a little afraid. One never knew how Mother would feel on waking. "I'll go with you," he offered and looked toward the highball and then resolutely took her hand. He knocked softly and apologetically on the bedroom door and then opened it and they went in together.

Her mother was sitting up in bed, and, even thought just awakened, she was still the most beautiful woman Diane had ever seen. Jet black hair crowned a face which might had been a model for a cameo, the forehead low, the nose finely chiseled, the thick-lipped mouth petulant and the chin firm. She sat erect, spurning the pillows at her back and through her sheer nightgown her slim, deep-bosomed body gleamed like a slender sword. But her blue eyes were stormy as they flecked her husband and then rested upon her daughter.

"Drinking your breakfast again, Dick?" she asked in a husky voice, her eyes on Diane. "Come here, Di. Your dress is climbing to your neck." Her slender hands straightened the dress. "Are you all ready? Is Michael waiting with the car?"

She wanted to ask her mother to allow her to go by train. The three of them had always gone that way up to last year and she loved it. And she knew exactly how to do it. You walked two blocks west to the subway and rode downtown to the third station which was Grand Central. There you bought a ticket for Royton, N.J., and rode for seventy miles. You got off and got into Jake Heidt's old taxicab and he drove you three miles north to the farm. But she didn't dare ask. Instead she answered.

"Yes, Mother. He has carried out my bag."

"Good," her mother smiled. "Au revoir, then, Darling. Have a good time." Her cool lips rested on Diane's cheek, pecked at her mouth, were gone. Her slim hands pushed her gently from her. "Caroline, you may bring my breakfast now."

"I say, Helen," her father suggested. "It might be pleasant to drive out with Diane. It's beginning to be pretty in the country."

"No doubt," her mother agreed dryly. "Good-bye, Diane."

Mother Didn't Love Daddy At All Now

Diane went slowly. Her heart had leaped at her father's proposal. She hesitated in the hall and then turned back to add her pleadings to her father's suggestion. But she halted at the sound of his wistful voice.

"Damn it, Helen," he was arguing. "Why shouldn't we ride to the farm with Di? We'd be company for her. The poor kid's lonesome. She certainly sees little of either of us. Come on, Helen!"

"Oh, Dick!" Her mother's laugh was cold with malice. "Really! Why this sudden solicitude for our only child? It's new, is'nt it? Becoming but not characteristic. No thank you. I don't care to go."

"Oh, come on. Why not, Helen?"

"I'll tell you why, Dick," her mother explained icily. "Because you were unfaithful to me. With a common little fool."

"That is not true," her father denied. "I admit I kissed her. But that was all. I was drunk."

"You admit it because you know I saw you. And you're always drunk. But it isn't important any more. At first I hated you. Now you merely bore me. You and yours. I can't bear the sight of any of you. Now run along. Your anxiety for Di will pass with your fourth highball. And have a full day."

Diane ran. She wanted to cry. Mother didn't love Daddy! She hated him. Two warm arms suddenly enveloped her.

"Never mind, Sugar," Caroline whispered. "They's just mad and talkin. Ne' mind what you heard them say."

But she wasn't sure then that Caroline was telling the truth. She wasn't sure now. . . . All she wanted to remember about the day was that it was cold and drab and the wind was from the north. If it had been from the west, none of this would have happened. At least that is what Uncle Tom had told her a long time ago when she was a very little girl.

"Watch the weather vane," he had said. "When it points west, the west wind's blowing and the chances are it's going to clear. Even when it's storming, the west wind always blows it away. And when it's clear, people always feel good. You'll find that out."

She had found it out. When the wind was from the west, it generally was clear and the day was a good one and then she was always happy. But when it blew from otherwheres, she often wasn't.

"Di," Uncle Tom's hand on her shoulder brought her back to the present and the farm kitchen. She looked up at him. He looked like her father and not a day older, though he was really twelve years older. He was tall and thin. He had laughing blue eyes and a strong mouth. "What you thinking about?" he grinned. She shook her head. "You're a funny little tyke," he said. "Twenty years older than your years. Come on and gather those eggs."

"Put on your sun bonnet," Granny ordered. Granny was gray and thin and blue-eyed and very alert and spry. "That sun's treacherous."

Aunt Nancy, buxom and brown, with soft brown eyes and a gentle mouth, tied the sun-bonnet around her neck and she and Uncle Tom went out.

"See there," Uncle Tom pointed to the big gilded weather vane on the barn from the dooryard, "the wind's from the west. I think it's going to shift south before the day's over and when it does, we'll likely have rain. But until it does, it blows good weather and in good weather people nearly always feel good."

Heavy, Ominous Clouds Were In The Sky

He picked up his scythe and whetstone and started toward the small five-acre south field to cut the hay there. Diane looked after him and beyond him.

Heat lay like a heavy blanket across the farm. Early as it was, the dew was already drying on the grass. With her basket on her arm, Diane went to the barnyard and thence to the chicken run. Up in the sky, white clouds were floating lazily westward. The sounds of horses pawing in their stalls came to her as through a slightly opened window.

It didn't take long to gather the eggs. The hens were not laying well in the heat. She took the eggs back to the house and left them with Aunt Nancy. She came back to the barn and lingered for a while in its cool darkness and listened to the hay in the loft above whispering. It soothed her. She fed the chickens and helped Aunt Nancy skim the milk and set it in cool jars in the well. Toward noon, she went out to the copse of wood, bordering on the south field where Uncle Tom was cutting hay and played with her dolls.

There were six of them. Two of them were real dolls. The other four were corn cobs which Uncle Tom had carved and Aunt Nancy had dressed. The two real dolls were Mother and Daddy. The others were Granny, Uncle Tom, Aunt Nancy and Betty. She played with them for a long time, holding long and intimate conversations with them, dressing and undressing them, rearranging the clothes they wore. The mournful note of a train whistling from the south came to her clearly so she knew that the wind had shifted.

Sadness came upon her. She sat doing nothing for a long time, thinking that she wished it was Daddy and Mother instead of Uncle Tom and Aunt Nancy who lived on the farm. And then she heard Granny calling her.

"Diane. Come up to the house. Somebody's here to see you.

"All right, Granny," she answered. "I'm coming."

But she didn't hurry because she couldn't imagine who would want to see her. Nobody but Granny and Uncle Tom and Aunt Nancy seemed to want her, really. As she passed the barn, she glanced at the weather vane and saw that the wind indeed had changed. There were heavy, ominious clouds in the sky. The arrow pointed southeast. That meant a coming storm.

Her blue eyes were stony.

Diane Was To Stay With Her Mother In The City

As she entered the empty kitchen the sound of voices came to her from the parlor. She recognized her father's and her heart leaped and then dropped as she heard him say:

"I'm home to stay, Mother. Helen and I are through. She got her decree and Di's custody yesterday. I can see her only once a month."

Aunt Nancy gasped and then her grandmother said:

"But there's only one ground for divorce in New York, Richard. Do you mean you would stoop to such a thing?"

"Oh, it isn't that bad," her father explained. "That was arranged."

"You mean you allowed Helen to prove such a thing against you in court? Why, Richard?"

"Because," her father said softly, "love was gone between us."

"That isn't true, Richard. You still love Helen."

We won't go into that now, Mother."

"All right," Granny snapped. "Helen thought she was tired either of you or of being married and you didn't have the gumption to hold her. But what about Diane? Don't you love her? What will become of her with no father to go to for help and understanding?"

"When a marriage breaks up," her father said wearily, "a child's place is with its mother."

"H'hm! That depends. Don't you want her?"

"God knows I do! But there's nothing to be done about it now."

"Richard Graeme," Granny pronounced, "you're a stick! I'll see if there isn't something to be done about it. The truth is that neither of you is fit to take care of her. She belongs out here where she'll be raised as a child should be. Plenty to eat and drink. Lots of fresh air and sleep. Enough tasks to keep her mind busy and a religious training that will make her love God and respect herself and marriage when she's old enough to enter it."

"I'm afraid," her father said sadly, "Helen won't take kindly to such suggestions. She isn't in the mood."

Diane went in then, timidly and slowly, her hand over her mouth, her eyes very big. She was bewildered and frightened. Her father sat in the big chair facing Granny and Aunt Nancy. His chin was in his hands. His eyes were haggard. He rose at sight of her and opened his arms.

"Di!" he whispered. "Di!"

His arms held her and his lips brushed her cheek. He sat down again and pulled her into his lap. "Well," he smiled, "you're grown, Di. And you're brown as an Indian. Have you had a nice summer?"

"I heard what you told Granny," she informed him gravely. "Are you going away from Mother?"

"For a little while," he explained carefully. "I'm going to stay out here. You'll go with Mother and I'll see you every once in a while."

"I don't want to go back to the city," she stated directly. "I don't like it. I like it out here. I want to stay with you. Why can't I, Daddy? Mother won't miss me. She's always so busy. I never see her much anyhow. Why can't she be the one to visit me?"

"You wouldn't understand, Baby. Let's try it this way."

"All right, Daddy," she agreed and suddenly began to cry.

* * *

Dick Was Soft, Needed A Lot Of Hard Work

He held her close and patted her gently as though she were still a very small baby. It felt good and soon she stopped crying and lay with her head resting against his shoulder. Nobody said anything but Aunt Nancy got up suddenly and left the room and Uncle Tom came in.

"Hello, Dick," he greeted. "What's this I hear about you and Helen breaking up and Helen taking Di away?"

"It's true," her father said.

"That's too bad," Uncle Tom said softly. "That is too bad!"

"I imagine," her father changed the subject, "that you can use another man now. You're haying, aren't you?"

"Yes." Uncle Tom eyed him thoughtfully up and down. "But I don't think you'll be much help, Dick. You're pretty soft. You need a lot of hardening."

It was then Diane noticed that they did not look as much alike as she had imagined. They looked alike, but there was a difference between them which had been wrought by their ways of living. Uncle Tom, ten years older, looked that much younger than her father. His tall body was lean and hard. Her father's features were pale and a little puffy. His hands trembled.

"Daddy," she asked him suddenly, "Aren't you ever going back to Mother?"

"Well, not for some time," he answered.

"Why aren't you? Don't you love her any more?"

"Yes," he whispered. "I love her."

"Well, then, why don't you bring her here to live with Granny and Aunt Nancy and Uncle Tom and us?"

"She doesn't like the country," he explained.

"She doesn't like Granny or Uncle Tom or Aunt Nancy, too."

"Don't say such things!"

"But she said she didn't," Di declared, her eyes puzzled. "I heard her that day you asked her to ride out here with you and me. Remember? She said, 'No' and when you asked her why, she said, 'You and yours bore me.' Well, 'yours' must be Granny and Uncle Tom and Aunt Nancy. It must be me, too, I think. But I'm here, too, so maybe she didn't put me in. Daddy, must I go back to the city? I don't want to. I want to stay with you. Please may I?"

He didn't answer her. He sat there, staring at nothing, trying to explain something which couldn't be explained. He buried his face in his hands. It was then Diane heard the car. It was coming fast and it turned into the farm driveway. She ran to the window and looked out.

"It's Mother," she said.

She Couldn't Find Anything Without Help

Helen swept in like a great lady. She was beautiful and her smile made Diane want to run and hug her. But she was afraid. You never knew how Mother would act. So she stood with her father's arm about her while her mother took the big chair her father had left.

"I've come for Diane," she stated. "We'll have to hurry as I have a dinner engagement. You've told them about our — our separation, Dick?"

"Helen," Granny said and her voice was soft and pleading. "won't you let Diane stay with us for a little while?"

"Certainly not," Helen refused flatly. "That's ridiculous. The court awarded her custody to me. Naturally, I'm her mother and a child's place is with her mother." She smiled at Diane. "Hello, Darling."

"Hello, Mother," Diane said without enthusiasm.

"Well, aren't you going to kiss me? Come here." Diane walked stiffly to her and received her kiss on the cheek. "Did you know I was coming to take you back to town with me?"

"Yes, Mother," Diane acknowledged. "But do we have to go right away? Can't we stay another month and go back when I usually do? Oh, Mother, the farm is so beautiful now! Uncle Tom's getting in the hay. The peaches are ripe and the apples are ripening. The geraniums have begun to bloom. Oh, Mother, you'd love it here. Please stay for a little while. Please, Mother!"

"Quite a plot," her mother's laugh tinkled and she looked at no one in particular. "You've already started to turn the child against me."

"That's not true, Helen," Granny declared sternly. "We've hardly ever mentioned either you or Dick. We'd like to have Di stay because we love her and because we believe it's healthier for her here. But, if she must go, she must. Can't you stay for dinner?"

"Thanks," Helen refused and glanced at her wrist watch. "I'm afraid we'll have to hurry back."

"I don't want to go back!" Diane cried suddenly. "Please, Mother, let me stay! Please!"

"Go up and get your things," Helen told her quietly.

She went up to her bedroom and tried blindly to find all her things to put in her bag. She couldn't find anything until Aunt Nancy came in quietly and lifted her onto the bed. She found and packed her things quickly and efficiently and locked the bag. Then she pulled Diane to her.

"Good-bye for a little while, Di," she said. "Don't cry. We'll see each other soon again. I feel it. You see if we don't. And here's a little gift for you. It's five dollars." She took up Diane's handbag and put the bill in it and handed the bag to her. "I was planning to buy you a going-away present with it but now that you're going so soon, I won't have time. When you get home, buy yourself something real nice and pretend that Aunt Nancy picked it out for you. Now, good-bye, sweet. Be a good girl."

Diane threw her arms around her neck and kissed her wetly. Downstairs, she saw her father, Uncle Tom and Granny through a mist. The only things she distinguished clearly were the hopelessness in her father's eyes and the hard, unyielding face of her mother as they coldly bade each other good-bye. Then the landscape was speeding past their car as it hurtled them homeward. Halfway home, they ran into the storm and Michael drove slowly through thunder, lightning and rain which pounced upon them on the wings of a turbulent wind from the southeast.

Diane Was Worried About Her Six Dolls

The West Wind did not blow again for a long, long time. The weeks followed each other soggily as the city sweltered with the rest of the nation in a humid heat which was punctuated, but not relieved by almost daily thunder storms.

Two weeks after she got home, Diane woke early one dreary morning and lay in her little bed and thought of the farm. By now, Uncle Tom would have finished threshing and putting his hay into the barn. There wouldn't be much for him but milk and take care of the odd jobs. If she were down there, she thought, he would have time to go with her while she showed him things she had found. Daddy, of course, would come, too.

She would show them the rabbit's nest she had found on the hillside in the north pacture and where a garter snake lived. They would watch the squirrels and if they were restless and very busy, Uncle Tom would say, "They're getting ready for the winter. And from the way they're working I'd say it was going to be a cold one." He always said that. And, maybe by now he would have told Daddy about her dolls and they would both inquire politely about them. How was little Betty? And Nancy and Tom. How was Granny's rheumatism? And how were the beautiful Mother and Daddy dolls, the only real ones? And she would answer them gravely.

Then she remembered suddenly that the little doll house in which they lived wasn't very good shelter for them in this kind of weather. She would write and ask Aunt Nancy to send them home here to her. She got up and went to her desk, got out paper and pencil and wrote:

"Dear Aunt Nancy. Please ask Uncle Tom to get my dolls. He knows where they are. Maybe they will be wet. If they are, dry them and send them. There are six. Some are corn. Two are real. Don't wash their clothes. I want to. How are you? How is Daddy? How is Uncle Tom? Is the calf getting big? It is lonesome here. Mother is well. I go to Central Park every day. Mother sends her love. Love to all. Diane."

It took a long time to finish the letter because Diane was not a very efficient writer. Her mother came in to wake her just as she was writing the address on the envelope.

"Darling!" she exclaimed. "What are you doing up so early?"

"I asked Aunt Nancy to send me my dolls," Di said.

Her mother read the letter and then read it again. Then she put it back on the desk and sat there, thinking.

"Sweet," she asked, after a little while, "do you want me to buy you some new dolls today?"

"No," Diane said, "I just want those. I love them. I don't want any more children just now. I'm afraid they'll be kind of wet."

"I see," her mother agreed. "Would you like to come shopping with me today? Maybe, we'll find something you like. Come. Caroline has your breakfast waiting for you."

Diane Was Determined To See Her Father

The dolls arrived one day a week later in the afternoon mail. There was also a letter but Diane didn't look at it at first because she was so anxious to see the dolls. When Caroline opened the box, they all looked pretty bedraggled. Aunt Nancy had obeyed her instructions and hadn't washed their clothes. But she had taken the mildew off.

"My goo'ness, Sugar," Caroline said, "these chillun of yours sure need a good cleanin'. Ain' you goin' to read your letter?"

So Diane opened the letter. It was from Granny.

"Dear Diane," she had written. "We are sending the dolls. Your father is very sick. The doctor says it is bronchial pneumonia. Yesterday, his temperature was 104. He keeps calling for your mother and you—" Diane did not wait to read the rest. She forgot all about her bedraggled children. With the letter in her hand, she ran to find her mother. She found her in the living-room, entertaining a bridge party.

"Mother!" she screamed, "Daddy is awful sick. His temperature is 104. He keeps calling for you and me. Can we go right away?"

Her mother flushed and then turned white. "Darling," she chastened Diane, "you must never rush in screaming like that. Excuse me please," she apologized and quickly read the letter. "Wait a little while. We'll see. I'll telephone later. But, of course, you'll stay," she told her guests. "It's nothing serious."

Nothing serious! Diane stared at her, bewildered and slowly left the room. But Daddy was dreadfully sick! Granny had said so. And he wanted her and Mother. Maybe he'd die.

In her room, she sat down at her desk and tried to think. But she couldn't. All she could see was her daddy lying in bed and calling for Mother and her. Caroline tried to comfort her. But she told her she wanted to be alone and Caroline, clucking, went out. Suddenly, she remembered the five dollars Aunt Nancy had given her. Maybe it would be enough to pay railroad fare to Roytown. If Mother couldn't go, she would have to go herself.

She found the bill still in her handbag. She put on her big straw hat. Something told her her mother would never allow her to make the trip alone so she went softly down the hall and let herself out the front door.

Helen Knew She Loved Dick—She Always Had

At the Grand Central station, she learned that the fare was only a dollar and forty cents and a train was leaving for Roytown in ten minutes. The ticket agent thought nothing about a little girl buying a ticket. Lots of kids traveled alone these days.

She had never known the train to go so slowly. It crawled out of the city, past factories and fields. It crossed a river and climbed a small mountain. Two hours later, Jake Heidt's ancient taxicab deposited her at the farmhouse and she felt Granny's old arms around her. Daddy, she told her, was a little better, but he was still very sick.

Meanwhile, behind her she left a frantic search. Caroline missed her about half an hour after she left and informed her mistress. The whole bridge party quickly searched the apartment. Helen called the janitor and he combed the building. There was no sign of her. Helen knew nothing about the five dollars Aunt Nancy had given Diane so she thought the child was somewhere in the city—unless she had been kidnaped! She and Caroline hurried to Central Park and to all the department stores to which Diane had ever accompanied her. Still no sign. They returned home and when they found no news of her there, Helen notified the police. Then she sat beside the telephone and waited.

Waiting, she thought of many things. She thought, maybe Di is dead. If she is, Dick will blame me, and perhaps he will be right. I should have let her stay down on the farm. I wouldn't because I thought I hated Dick. But I don't. I want him now, him and nobody else. I think I've always wanted him. I've been a fool. But he can't come because he's ill. Now I've lost everything, love, my husband, my child and eleven years of my life. Maybe, Dick will die, too. That thought drove an icy fear into her heart. "Oh, God," she prayed, "please don't take them from me! If Diane is found I'll bring her straight to Dick. If he doesn't want me now and she wants to stay there with him, I'll leave them together." At that moment the telephone rang. It was Granny.

"Diane just got here," she said. "Nancy had given her five dollars when she left here and she said she ran out of the house and got on a train so she could be with her father. She's waiting to see him now."

"Thank God!" Helen breathed. "How is Dick?"

"Well, he's a little easier. But the crisis is about here. The doctor just arrived. I have to go."

"Mother," Helen said. "I'll be down there as fast as I can make it."

* * *

Diane Felt Good—The Wind Was From West

They waited in the parlor while the doctor was in the bedroom upsairs with her father. Granny and Aunt Nancy sat close together. Diane stood leaning against her mother who sat opposite them. Uncle Tom stared out the window. Diane felt her mother trembling. Her hand against Diane's was cold. Diane was afraid, but she tried to comfort her.

"Everything will be all right, Mother," she soothed.

Granny stared at her. Aunt Nancy's eyes filled with tears. Uncle Tom turned from the window and grinned stiffly.

"Well, the weather's with him," he said. "It's clearing."

The doctor appeared at his shoulder. He looked tired. He said:

"He's passed the crisis. You can go up now, Mrs. Graeme."

Her mother took Diane's hand and they went up together. Her father lay in the big bed. He looked thin and tired. His eyes were sunken. Her mother pushed her forward and she walked slowly over to him. He looked at her and his eyes brightened.

"Hello, Baby," he smiled. "When did you come? How's Mother?"

"Oh, Dick!" her mother sobbed and knelt beside the bed, "Oh, Dick, "I've missed you so!"

"I know," her father said, "because I missed you that same way. We belong to each other, Helen. Nothing like this must ever happen again."

"It won't!" her mother promised, "Oh, it won't!"

"Are we going to stay here on the farm awhile, Mother?" Diane asked timidly.

"As long as you like, darling," her mother said.

Diane felt good. And she suspected there was a reason. She walked to the window and looked at the weather vane on the barn. Yep. It was pointed in the right direction. The wind was from the west.

W. I. In Northern Alberta

DONALDA

Arrangements were made by the committee in charge to engage B. Pickering to care for the cemetery and to plant trees to replace any that may have died. A letter from Donald Russell, who is serving with the First Edmonton Regiment in England, added interest to the meeting. The institute quilt was purchased by Mrs. Lausen. Meetings will be held on the third Thursdays during the summer instead of third Wednesdays. Mrs. M. Damberger presented the lesson in "How to Buy."

LOUGHEED

On a program devoted to child welfare, Mrs. McCracken stressed the need of a more sympathetic understanding of child problems in a paper entitled "Ugly Ducklings." A quizz on child psychology which followed was won by Mrs. A. C. Weir. Members were guests of the Girls' club at the home of their supervisor on May 11.

MULHURST

Sewing for needy families in the district and making a quilt to be shown at the conference, members are busy this spring. Plans for this event are in the hands of joint committees from Falun, Bonnie Glen and Mulhurst institutes. Miss A. Stone has been appointed official delegate. A concert and dance has added to the general funds.

EDSON

Program given recently under the supervision of Miss M. Fulmer was of a patriotic nature. Readings from Kipling and music formed the larger part of the entertainment. Mrs. V. Mahan also read an account of the convention held recently in Nova Scotia for the conservation of foods. Mrs. M. M. Albert showed a fine platter of old willow and told the story of this pattern in a short poem. Mrs. E. Earle reported on W.I. work and arrangements were made to entertain the constituency conference on June 21, when Edson institute will be hostesses.

GRIMSHAW

Peace River and Berwyn institutes were visitors at a recent meeting when Mrs. William Stewart, provincial president, reviewed John Murray Gibbon's book, "Canadian Mosaic." Mrs. George Forbes spoke on the care of house plants. Three names were added to the roll.

FALUN

Mrs. Ness reported on arrangements for the coming conference and Mrs. Kadlec reported a dance held at Pigeon Valley school. Sick friends and members will be remembered with gifts of fruit.

BURNT LAKE

Members of institutes in this constituency are learning the song, "May God Preserve Thee Canada," and it will be sung at the coming conference under the direction of Mrs. Learned, constituency convener. This meeting will be held at Rocky Mountain House on July 13. Plans are under way to hold a handicraft exhibit at the local school some time in August. Members are doing Red Cross work.

KITSCOTY

Speaking on agricultural subjects, Mrs. Pidcock read a paper prepared by Mrs. Van Nortwick at a recent meeting. Mrs. Harmer also arranged an interesting contest. Quilt blocks were distributed and a donation was voted to the Salvation Army war fund.

KINUSO

Meeting at the home of Mrs. Boisvert, members enjoyed a short talk on health matters given by Mrs. Maclellan.

RIO GRANDE

Routine business occupied attention when Mrs. R. Koebel entertained the meeting at her home in Hazelmore. The name of Mrs. H. Barker was added to the roll.

HIGH PRAIRIE

Constable Brown attended the meeting of the institute and gave an interesting demonstration in first aid. Members assisted the teachers' association in their Empire celebration by conducting a refreshment booth at the athletic grounds. They will also sponsor a clean-up day under the supervision of Mrs. F. Pottage. A number attended the constituency conference at Kinuso on May 29. A donation was voted to the Salvation Army war service fund.

GADSBY

Twenty-eight grandmothers were guests and received small gifts as souvenirs of the occasion when Mrs. A. W. Rowe entertained the institute at her home recently. Music made an enjoyable prelude to tea at which the president, Mrs. George Hampshire poured tea. Younger women assisted as servitors. A contribution was voted to the Salvation Army and the institute will also aid in renovating the community hall.

ALLIANCE

Fifty dollars was voted recently to the A.W.I. war emergency fund from this small institute.

STROME

Observing their 25th anniversary, members were entertained by Mrs. W. Huyck, former provincial president, who gave a resume of activities of both local and provincial organizations during the past quarter century. Pieces were given out and a quilt will be made.

PIBROCH

Mrs. Eakin reported on W.I. activities and Mrs. Sexty spoke on health matters at a recent meeting of the institute.

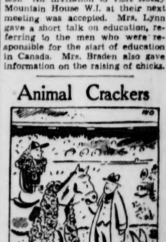

SEXSMITH

Annual entertaining of grandmothers in town and district is always a happy event and the one this year was no exception when members and friends gathered at the home of Mrs. D. M. Innes, where a suitable program was enjoyed. A sum of money was voted to the Salvation Army war service fund and help was given in paying the funeral expenses of a needy person.

BEAVER FLATS

Guests of the W.I. girls' club, members received roots of perennials as souvenirs, and spent an enjoyable afternoon. Flowers were sent to Mr. and Mrs. Rogers, Red Deer, upon their 53rd wedding anniversary. Condolences were also sent to Mrs. Sande whose husband recently died. Mrs. Braden, Jr., entertained with an interesting contest. An invitation to visit Rocky Mountain House W.I. at their next meeting was accepted. Mrs. Lynn gave a short talk on education, referring to the men who were responsible for the start of education in Canada. Mrs. Braden also gave information on the raising of chicks.

Points For Parents

By EDYTH THOMAS WALLACE

This — Mother: "You are staying with grandmother today because I must go in a hurry. Some day soon, when I have more time, I will take you for a walk."

Not This — Mother: "Come on—mother's in a rush . . . No, you can't stop to look in that window . . . do try to walk faster . . . don't stop to pick up that stick . . . etc., etc."

Until a child is old enough to have some understanding of time, it is better to leave him at home when mother must go somewhere in a hurry.

Those Hidden Dangers Are Threat To All Motorists

Vision, Lighting Are Two Major Factors In Avoiding Road Mishaps

Hidden danger is the worst form of danger. That which can be seen can be avoided. To no one is the question of vision of more importance than to the motorist. The first and rockbottom principle of safe driving is good visibility at all times. Yet this vital element is paid scant heed by many drivers today.

Windshield and side window glass is permitted to become discolored and when this occurs the safety factor is greatly diminished.

Discolored glass in old cars came from the plastic used in old forms of safety glass. The plastic in safety glass now in use doesn't discolor easily and is much safer than before. Motorists with the old type of glass can replace today with safety plate glass which all car manufacturers use for windshields.

But although the question of windshield and window glass is highly important, lights are probably the supreme factor where vision is concerned. This fact takes on increasing importance when one considers there are twice the accidents at night-time with only half the traffic. That bald statement is the most powerful reminder that much of your safety depends on your lights.

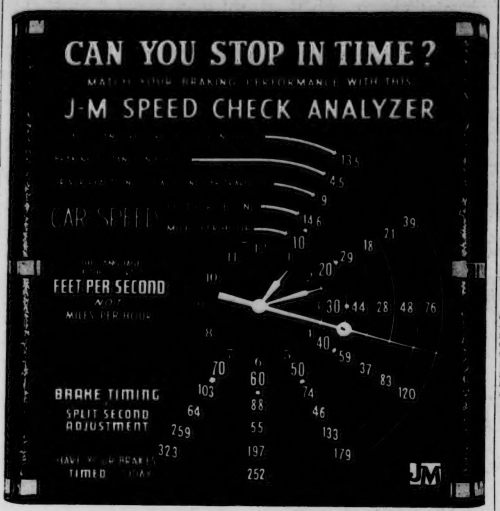

Since the first grotesque horseless carriage rolled down the avenue, improvement in headlights has been a continuous process. Each year each new model has had better lighting equipment, until the 1940 model, which signalized a bigger step ahead than ever with the new sealed beam lamps.

These new lamps, hermetically sealed, provide 50 per cent more light than any previous lamp. But the fact that a motorist does not possess one of the latest models does not mean that he cannot improve his lighting equipment. Proper servicing will work wonders.

Prompt replacing of blackened bulbs, cleaning the reflectors, replacing cracked lenses and checking the focussing and wiring, are all matters that should be attended to whenever vision of the motorist is not as close to 100 per cent as the type of equipment will permit.

Edmonton's police traffic squad, under the direction of Sergt. MAj. Alex Riddell, will give the fullest co-operation to motorists wishing to have the lights on their cars tested. In the campaign to make Edmonton streets and the roads surrounding the city the safest on the continent, the police traffic squad is patiently going about the job of advising, admonishing and in extreme cases of neglect, prosecuting motorists who neglect the important matter of good vision at all times.

But, as has been pointed out in previous articles appearing in the automobile section of Saturday's Bulletin, the matter of equipment is important. The matter of enforcement of the law by the police is also important, but lastly and most important of all is the honest sense of responsibility that the motorist himself develops and maintains. In plain words, Mr. Motorist, it's finally up to you. If Edmonton streets are to be made safe for citizens, every motorist has a responsible and what should be a willing part to play.

This ingenious speed check analyzer shows very clearly several very interesting facts about the re-action of car drivers to stop signals and the actual number of feet a car travels before responding to brakes that are 100% efficient. For instance, your car travelling at 10 miles per hour will roll 9 feet before you start to use your brakes, but only travels half that distance, or 4½ feet, before coming to a full stop. At 30 miles per hour your car will roll 76 before stopping, but almost 40% of this distance is travelled before you start to use your brake. The clock is operating at Standard Service Station.

NEW STATIONS FOR RECRUITING WILL BE SET UP

OTTAWA, June 1—Establishment of permanent recruiting stations for the Canadian Active Service Force across the country with supplementary recruiting centres at points less accessible than military district headquarters was announced by the defence minister, Hon. Norman Rogers, to parliament yesterday.

Mr. Rogers made particular reference to recruiting centres in "the interior of British Columbia" and northern and northeastern New Brunswick.

The additional recruiting stations will be set up "so that those desirous of enlisting may avoid long trips involving considerable expense, and that the department may have available, for use when required, a registration of personnel," said the minister.

"Instructions have been issued to district officers commanding to recruit up to establishment reinforcements of the second division. C.A.S.F.," said Mr. Rogers. "Instructions also have been issued to take all necessary administrative steps to mobilize units of the third division and to commence recruiting as soon as possible."

NOTED SOLDIER, CANADA PRISON CHIEF, IS DEAD

OTTAWA, June 1.—Brigadier-General William St. Pierre Hughes, noted soldier and penologist and former superintendent of penitentiaries, died at his home here early today. He was 76.

General Hughes did much to help convicts and to modernize Canadian prisons.

The late Sir Sam Hughes, national defence minister in the first Great War, was a brother.

Before going overseas to serve in the first Great War, General Hughes was inspector of penitentiaries and during his absence that office was abolished by act of parliament and a new office, that of superintendent of penitentiaries was created.

On his return to Canada, he was given this job, which he held until 1932, when he retired.

He was born in Durham county, Ont., June 6, 1865, into a military family, his father, John Hughes, being the son of a surgeon general in the Imperial army and his mother, the daughter of a colonel in the Royal Irish Artillery.

BY GERALD L. KAUFMAN

A DRESS UNKNOWN

Poor Vera Squnch has just disappeared. Will you help the police to find her? They have nothing to go by except a few torn scraps of paper which they've just succeeded in pasting together, and some facts gathered from the neighbors.

THE FACTS: Vera never had more than two dresses at a time.

Actually she seldom had more than one, as she was in the habit of selling her old dress shortly after she bought a new one.

Her new dress was always a different color from the old.

THE NOTES (in Vera Squnch's own handwriting):

A. I sold my old dress today before running away.
B. The dress I bought before I bought the one I got yesterday was BLUE.
C. The dress I sold before buying the dress I got yesterday was BROWN.
D. The dress I sold before I bought the dress I got before buying the one yesterday was GREEN.
E. The dress I bought yesterday is the same color as the one I sold after buying the BROWN one.

1. What color dress was Vera wearing when she ran away? Answer: .....
2. What color dress did she sell today? .....
3. What color dress did she buy yesterday? .....
4. What color was the oldest dress referred to in the notes that Vera left? .....

After you have answered the four questions above, figure out the color of the last dress she mentioned buying. Solution Monday.

ANSWER TO YESTERDAY'S PUZZLE, ALL IN THE FAMILY:

The Desler sitting in Seat N—Jack Spub; His wife's father is Seat F—Phil-Clade; JACK SPUB'S wife in Seat S—Ruth Spub; JACK SPUB'S sister in Seat W—Dora Clade. What happened was that Jack Spub married Phil Clade's daughter by a former marriage. Then Phil Clade, a widower, married Jack's elder sister (Dora Spub), who thus became Dora Clade.

R. C. M. P. GUNS KILLED FARMER WHO SHOT SON

CLARESHOLM, June 1.—An inquest jury last night found that Charles Hanson, 68 - year - old wealthy farmer who fatally shot his son, George, was killed by Royal Canadian Mounted Police bullets at his farm home near Parkland. May 22 after he had shot and killed Constable Gordon Counsell.

Motive that caused the aged farmer, a native of Minnesota, to wound his 38-year-old son five times at a nearby Parkland farm, May 21, and then attempt to fight it out with police from his barricaded farm home, was not made known at the inquest here. Parkland is 60 miles south of Calgary.

The jury found that Constable Counsell of the R.C.M.P. died from a shot fired by Hanson after the constable had entered the house with two other policemen to capture the farmer, and that Charles Hanson died of police bullets later. Hanson's death was "justifiable homicide," the jury ruled.

Narvik Captured Under Heavy Guns Of British Fleet

LONDON, June 1.—An eye-witness account of the capture of Narvik by the Allies made public here Thursday said that while the heaviest guns of the British fleet silenced shore batteries and bombarded the German positions, French, Polish and Norwegian troops routed the Germans in spirited fighting.

The fall of the far northern iron port occurred at 11:20 a.m. Wednesday, exactly an hour after the British fleet started its bombardment of the town's defences.

Government Welcomes Donations Of Money, War Materials Says Ralston

OTTAWA, June 1.—The government welcomes donations of money and war materials, Hon. J. L. Ralston, minister of finance, told parliament yesterday.

T. L. Church (Con., Toronto Broadview) called attention to "the offering of various kinds of mechanized equipment by some municipalities, corporations and private individuals to be given to the government voluntarily as a contribution to Canada's war effort."

KITCHENER TANK FUND

Meanwhile Defence Minister Norman Rogers confirmed that he had sent a message to Mayor Joseph Meiningger of Kitchener, Ont., endorsing a "buy-a-tank" fund to be launched today. The minister said a light tank would be sent to Kitchener from the armored fighting vehicles school at Camp Borden for display purposes if required.

Controllers Fred Hamilton and J. D. McNish arrived from Toronto to confer with the munitions minister, Hon. C. D. Howe, and other ministers on Toronto's plan for a $1,000,000 civic subscription fund to purchase bombing aircraft, tanks and other war material. The controllers said Mr. Rogers had approved the Toronto plan.

"It took us just eight minutes to explain our plan and just two minutes for Mr. Rogers to say it was alright with him," Controller McNish said. "Sure, we'll raise the million. We're not worrying about that."

Most offers of material aid to the government took the form of money, Mr. Ralston said. Frequently it was suggested the donations be used for a particular purpose.

"I believe that what the government has found is that it was very difficult to earmark a particular sum of money for a particular piece of equipment," he said. Such an arrangement would mean maintaining a special fund for the particular purpose.

CASH IS PREFERRED

"Therefore, it has been indicated to the donors, so far as I know of any offers having been made, that it would be preferable if they would permit that money to be put into the consolidated revenue fund, and we have advised them that the consolidated revenue fund will be devoted, among other things, to the purchase of equipment of that kind.

"I should like to add, however that if there are offers of special pieces of equipment for particular purposes, the government will be very glad to give consideration to them."

Government Guarantees Loans To Help Home Owners

Banks Prepared To Offer Money At Lower Rates

Lending Facilitated In Order That Business May Reap Benefits From Increased Activity In Building

Home owners are being encouraged to undertake at once repairing and remodelling of their homes in order to provide work in the building trades and, by putting money into circulation preventing business from becoming stagnant. In order to facilitate this the government has through the Home Improvement Loans Guarantee Act, 1937, made it possible for lending institutions to issue credit.

Under the terms of the Home Improvement Loans Guarantee Act, 1937, the government of Canada has the power to guarantee approved lending institutions against losses up to 15 per cent of the aggregate value of loans made by each such lending institution for the financing of repairs, alterations and additions to rural and urban homes.

The aggregate amount of home improvement loans, subject to guarantee, may not exceed $50,000,000, and the total liability of the government in respect of such guarantees will, therefore, not exceed $7,500,000.

APPROVED INSTITUTIONS

In order that lending facilities may be available as widely as possible throughout the country, the governor in council has already approved as lending institutions all the chartered banks.

Home improvement loans are made solely to owners of residential property to which repairs, alterations and additions are to be made.

The word "owner," however, is defined as broadly as possible. Thus, under the regulations, "owner" shall include any person, firm, partnership, estate, trustee, corporation or any other entity capable of and holding real or immovable property, including a life tenant of property; a person holding property under an agreement for sale; a lessee of property under a lease expiring not less than three years after he matures by of any loan made to a lessee under the act; a lessee or land under a lease from the crown or from any municipality or public body where the lessee owns the dwelling erected on such land; a homesteader who has completed two-thirds of the requirements upon which his title to the property depends; a mortgagor of property who has an equity of redemption therein under a mortgage or contract, a mortgagee of property who is in possession thereof; a person who is in possession of property through a prescriptive title, and any other person having rights approximating ownership in property.

An "owner" may also include the husband of the borrower, and the wife of the borrower having dower or other rights in her husband's property.

REPAIRS AND ADDITIONS

The purpose of a home improvement loan is to finance the making of any repairs, alterations or additions to any rural or urban home, intended for the improvement of such rural or urban home. Without limiting the generality of the foregoing, it shall include work involving expenditure for labor, materials and equipment in connection with such improvements, as the following:

1—The installation, repair or improvement of heating systems including permanent equipment such as stokers, oil-burners and wood, coal, gas and electric furnaces and boilers, which are a part of such system.

2—The installation, repair or improvement of electric light and power systems including private lighting and power plants and other permanent fixtures, including connections to power lines.

3—The installation, repair or improvement of plumbing systems including permanently installed waterheaters, sinks, tubs and so forth.

4—The installation, repair or improvement of built-in-air-conditioning and fire control systems.

5—The installation, repair or improvement of house equipment but only if such equipment is built-in equipment or part of built-in equipment or permanently attached to the structure and excluding furniture and furnishings and portable or removable equipment.

6—Painting, paperhanging and general redecorating but excluding such items as curtains, drapes and rugs.

7—Structural alterations to an exterior or interior which are designed to improve or modernize or increase the usefulness of a rural or urban home.

8—Additions to buildings including the addition of one or more rooms or stories.

9—Alterations or additions to a dwelling designed to increase the number of self-contained dwelling units.

10—The erection of summer cottages and tourist cabins but only if such cottages and cabins are erected on property on which a dwelling is situated and if they are to be operated not as a separate business enterprise but as more or less incidental to the owner's business of farming or the like.

11—The erection of an attached or detached garage and outbuildings.

12—The erection, repair or improvement of fences, the construction or repair of private driveways, roadways, sidewalks or curbs and landscaping of a permanent character.

13—The sinking, making, installation, repair or improvement of wells and all types of water supply systems for the dwelling or any outbuildings or for farm purposes.

14—The installation, repair or improvement of sewage connections to public mains, and sewage disposal systems including septic tanks.

15—The installation, repair or improvement of farm equipment and machinery, but only if such machinery and equipment is built-in and permanently attached to real or immovable property and excluding portable or removable equipment and machinery.

16—The erection of, or the making of repairs, additions or improvements to barns, silos, greenhouses, drying sheds and other outbuildings on a farm including separate housing accommodation for persons working on the farm.

17—Demolition and moving of buildings.

AMOUNT OF LOAN

The maximum amount which may be borrowed under a home improvements loan is $2,000 for each piece of single family property, or, where in the case of a duplex, an apartment house or other multiple family dwelling, the maximum amount which may be borrowed is $1,000 plus $1,000 for each family unit provided for in the building when the repairs, alterations and improvements are completed.

The limit of time allowed for the repayment of a home improvement loan is three years for a loan of $1,000 or less, and five years for a loan exceeding $1,000. Loans are repayable in equal monthly instalments as are adapted to the financial circumstances of the individual borrower. In no case, however, are payments to be made less frequently than once a year.

The maximum charge which may be made by an approved lending institution for a home improvement loan must not exceed a rate of discount of 3¼ per cent. for a one-year loan repayable in equal monthly instalments and proportionate rates for other periods.

PROMISSORY NOTE

Every borrower who secures a home improvement loan for the purpose of making repairs, alterations or additions to a rural or urban home which he owns, must sign as maker of a promissory note in the form approved. The note may also be signed as co-maker by the wife or husband of the owner.

However, the note, that is, the promise of the borrower to pay, is the only security given to the lending institution. As long as the borrower is not in default no other security by way of endorsement, collateral or mortgage lien or otherwise may be taken by the lending institution. In other words, home improvement loans are intended to be based on character and income and not on tangible security.

If the prospective borrower has sufficient income to enable him to pay the monthly or other instalments as they come due, and if his character is such as to lead the lending institution to believe that he will desire to pay his just debts, he should have no difficulty in securing a home improvement loan.

Any person who makes a statement in an application for a home improvement loan which is false in any material respect, or who uses the proceeds of a home improvement loan otherwise than for payment of repairs, alterations or additions to the rural or urban home on which he is the owner specified in his application for a home improvement loan, shall be liable on summary conviction to a penalty of not less than $25 and not more than $500.

SECURING LOAN PROCEDURE

If you are the owner of a rural or urban home and if you desire to make any repairs, alterations or additions to such home, which are eligible to be financed by means of a home improvement loan, you have two optional methods of procedure:

1—You may consult with your local bank manager or an official of other approved lending institutions who will be able to give you detailed information and advice in regard to the home improvement plan, provide you with an application form and accept your application; or,

2—You may consult with an architect, builder, contractor, or building material dealer familiar with the home improvement plan who can assist you or act as your agent in negotiating a loan through a chartered bank or other approved lending institution.

If you prefer to negotiate your loan directly, you will choose the first option, and the proceeds of the loan will be paid to you to enable you to pay your contractor, or architect, or building material dealers, etc. If, on the other hand, you prefer not to deal directly with the lending institution, you will select the second option, and the proceeds of the loan will be paid directly to your contractor or to those who have supplied labor and materials, on a certificate from you that the work has been completed to your satisfaction.

In any case, you must sign an application form giving the information which is required. Decision whether you are entitled to a loan, and the amount of the loan to be made, is left in the discretion of the lending institution, but a responsible official of the lending institution is required to check and scrutinize your application and to certify that to the best of his knowledge and belief the conditions and purposes of the loan are such as will qualify it for guarantee under the act.

This article is intended to cover the essential information regarding the working of the Home Improvement Loans Guarantee Act, 1937, as it affects the borrower. For further details, interpretations or advice, consult your local banker or representative of any other approved lending institution, or your local home improvement advisory committee, where such exist, or write the Housing Administration, department of finance, Ottawa, Ont.

Children Love Wall Paper

By HELEN SPRACKLING

However you look at it, wall paper has special value in the child's room. There's the practical value of its washability. Tremendously important are its educational values which tie in so closely with the decorative themes. Children love pattern. It fascinates them, from the young toddler who broadens both his vocabulary and his worldly experience through whatever the motif may be, to the restless "teen indulging his favorite hobby—ships, birds, firemen, Tyrolean figures, falling leaves—whatever the design—each plays its gay part, and when one, in the natural changing restlessness of a child's interest, has served its purpose, it's a simple matter to install another. There's the psychological influence on the youthful inhabitant of living intimately with its subtle, pleasing color schemes. I cannot stress this too much. Everyone knows that colors can irritate or soothe according to their quality and intensity. No longer do we give children the bright primary colors in great doses. It's bad for nerves as well as taste. The soft, well-modulated dusty pinks, pale yellows, gray blues and green of wall paper (applied according to the exposure of the room) make ideal backgrounds for the growing child. Not only do they surround his present world with genuine beauty, they establish an appreciation of color and design that will later enrich his whole life.

Color Is News

By MARY DAVIS GILLES

. . . Color is always the most exciting feature of decoration.

Before you grasp the subtleties of the furniture design, the room arrangement, the accessories, you realise the color theme. And the wall color, of course, is the leading note.

So it pays to use the right color on your walls and the new wall papers will help you. The Fall lines show an excellent range of unusual decorator colors, colors with body, colors that you can build a whole room around.

. . . That Dusty Rose is high on the popularity list.

You will see it used for walls, rugs, china, pottery, accessories and upholstery.

. . . That Gray and Yellow are also running up.

They are popular used together or separately as leading themes in a color scheme. The new wall papers show gray with white designs, with a hint of yellow or rose or silver.

Also watch blues for walls. In sunny rooms, or in that occasional room completed with much white and a hint of claret to warm it up or chartreuse if you want to achieve a chilly effect, blue is excellent.

. . . That there is a new flexibility in the use of paper.

In many lines there are plain wall papers in colors matching the ground color of figured papers. When you use these possibly only the fireplace wall or the window walls are surfaced with the figured paper and the rest is plain. You may look through an archway to an elaborately figured wall, but it's the only one in the room.

Wallpapers may be hung horizontally round a room or up and down in the conventional manner. The many stripes and the striped arrangement of many florals suggest such novelty effects. In fact, instead of flatly wall papering a whole room today you can let your fancy run free and use wall paper with the flexibility of a paint brush.

Window Sill, Porch Rail Give Space For Garden

Gardens for apartment dwellers

By DEAN HALLIDAY

Edmonton Bulletin Garden Expert

A window sill or porch rail gives the apartment dweller space enough for a flower garden, which can be made quite satisfying. If this available space happens to be on the shady side of the building, your choice of plants will be somewhat restricted, but on the other hand you can have the satisfaction of growing plants which would not succeed if exposed to the full sun.

The above Garden Graph offers a planting diagram showing how to arrange shade loving plants. The plants and their position in a window box are given in the accompanying key—A, B, C and D.

Ferns and foliage plants will grow well in a shaded window or porch box, among them the Boston, Holly, Asparagus or Sprenger ferns. Some of the smaller palms can also be used for green effect as well as the Aspidistra, Kenilworth Ivy, Wandering Jew and Periwinkle.

Nazi Mechanized Equipment Losses Said 40 Per Cent

WASHINGTON, June 1.—Well informed members of the House of Representatives said Thursday that General George C. Marshall, United States army chief of staff, told a house appropriations sub-committee it was estimated that 40 per cent. of the German army's mechanized equipment had been destroyed in the Nazi's desperate drive to the channel.

There are approximately 3,000,000 automobile radios in use in the United States.

MISS LAURETTE CARRIGAN
member of the executive committee of the Twentieth Century Women's Liberal Club, who is assisting in the arrangements for the tea to be held on Sunday afternoon at the west-end home of Mrs. J. Boyd McBride.

Colorful summer blossoms, delicately shaded lilacs, tulips and lilies-of-the-valley and fern banking the fireplace in the South Edmonton home of the bride's mother made an attractive setting for the marriage of Shirley Irene Lovatt, eldest daughter of Mrs. E. M. Lovatt, and Mr. Joseph Caswell, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Caswell, also of this city.

Interest of friends in sports as well as social circles is shared in the marriage for the bride's mother, the former Miss Ethel Anderson, was a member of the first Commercial Graduates basketball team. Miss Anderson played on the team from 1914 to 1917, and it is the first marriage of any child of an original member of the team.

Performed at half past two oclock, the ceremony was conducted by Rev. A. Stewart.

DUSKY PINK

Attired in a smart afternoon frock of dusky pink boucle, worn with navy blue accessories, hat, slippers and gloves, the bride was a graceful figure at her wedding. Her flowers were cream roses worn en corsage.

Miss Alice Stewart-Irvine, cousin of the bride, was bridesmaid and wore for the occasion a tailored suit of black, white sheer blouse, and modish white accessories. Her flowers were a corsage of deep red roses pinned to the lapel of her suit.

Mr. B. Bounds was groomsman.

For her daughter's marriage, Mrs. Lovatt was a smart figure in her afternoon dress of black boucle silk, with turquoise blue flower model and her corsage was of lilies-of-the-valley.

Mrs. Joseph Caswell, mother of the bride, wore a becoming frock of black and white silk, black tailored hat with white trim, black shoes, and valley lilies en corsage.

RECEPTION

Reception to immediate relatives was arranged following the ceremony. Toast to the bride was proposed by her grandfather, Col. Pete Anderson.

Later in the afternoon the bride and bridegroom left by motor for a holiday trip to Banff. To travel the bride wore her wedding frock with topcoat of dark navy blue.

Following their honeymoon, they will take up residence in Edmonton.

GIRLS' CLUB MEMBERS PLAN SUMMER DANCE

Doing their bit to aid Canada's effort in the war, members of the Stagette Club have undertaken a definite program of war assistance work, and to aid funds for this cause, they are entertaining at an attractive "cotton ball" in the Silver Glade on Friday evening, June 7. Arrangements are being made to make the affair one of the most colorful of early summer functions and Miss Zola Chadwick is convener of arrangements for the party. She is being assisted by Miss Dorothy Rose, Miss Sadie McKinlay and Miss Betty McPherson.

Miss Marion and Miss Helen Aikenhead entertained at their Calgary home on Friday evening, in honor of Miss Madeline Austin of the southern city, whose marriage will take place shortly.

Miss Mary Macbeth was named to replace Miss Beatrice Gillespie, who is leaving the staff of the Youth Training school, 10334 123 street, on July 1, at a recent meeting of the board of the school. Graduation day for the school was set for Tuesday, June 25.

Banquet Honors Graduands Of High School

MORE than 150 guests were present at a delightful affair held in the Corona hotel on Friday evening, when graduands of the Edmonton Technical high school and their friends attended the third annual graduation banquet and dance. For the occasion lilacs and ferns made attractive table decorations, together with green tapers.

President of the Students' association, Mr. Jack Moffatt, acted as chairman of the evening, and the invocation was made by Mr. M. F. McFayden.

TOASTS

Toast to the graduands was proposed by Mr. G. A. McKee, O.B.E. superintendent of city schools, and replied to by Albert Deugau, president of the graduation class. Toast to the winners of academic pins, including Jean Cawley, Stella Wallace, Avis Eaton, Ronald Biggs, Ray Owen, Willard Worthington, Ralph Allman and Armin Kutzner, was proposed by Mr. A. E. Ottewell, chairman of the public school board, and replied to by Mr. Ray Owen. Mrs. Ottewell presented the pins to the students.

Miss Avis Eaton proposed the toast to "Our Parents," and Mr. W. T. Worthington replied. The school was toasted by Miss Marjorie Barringham, and Mr. M. J. Hilton replied.

"Tech at Work and at Play," a motion picture of the students' work, was presented for the students and their friends. The film was taken by Mr. W. E. Robinson.

AT HEAD TABLE

Seated at the head table were Mr. and Mrs. G. A. McKee, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Ottewell, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. McFarland, Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Hilton, Mrs. Stanley Wharton, Miss Marjorie Barringham, Miss Avis Eaton, Mr. Leon Kagna, Miss Elaine Calver, Mr. Albert Deugau, Mr. George J. Ross, Mr. Jack Moffatt and Mr. I. A. Gleddie.

Yesterday's Lover May Be Today's Menace

FIVE years ago, when Betty Baker was 18, she was having an extremely good time with her college group. She was a little young for college, away from home for the first time; inexperienced and pretty and ready for thrills of all sorts.

Immediately she was taken up by a fascinating circle; the youngsters who figured in theatricals, dramatic readings, house parties, weekend trips. Everything in short, for which youth longs. Love affairs were of course a part of all this fun, and Betty found herself appropriated by a fascinating, big, handsome youth whose amazement, when she protested against what she felt was a too intimate relationship, was almost pitying. Why, what was the matter with her? Who had given her silly prudish notions? Tod didn't know whether to be amazed or angry with her and her nonsense.

A FOOL'S PARADISE

Betty had been brought up in a quiet, decent home, but to her youth and eagerness everything at home had seemed rather dull, too. After all, it didn't matter what one did as long as it hurt only oneself. So without any further analysis or argument she presently slipped into the dizzy delights of being Tod's girl, and having Tod escort her about and boss her and buy her big warm gloves, when she lost her gloves, and big fur coats for her. From December until June she lived in that Fool's Paradise that has been peopled by so many little girls before Betty.

Then Tod graduated and went away, and Betty drove him a hundred miles home rather thoughtfully, planning letters to Tod, wondering what she'd do without him. He hadn't said anything of marriage, and she hadn't exactly expected him to, but somehow life had gone terribly flat and she didn't feel at all sure of the next step. Complete surrender to Tod had left her feeling that she never again could feel quite so close to any other man; there were so many things to remember besides the actual loving. A day when both had been drenched in a sudden rain, and he had bought her a complete change of clothing in a small town general store; a night when she had been sick for hours and he had been kindness itself in caring for her; breakfast together; notes; telephone calls—a thousand intimate details which no girl anticipated, somehow, when she was carried away in the first rush of an affair.

From December until June she lived in that Fool's Paradise that has been peopled by so many little girls before Betty.

Betty wrote seven times to Tod and telegraphed twice; Tod wrote two letters and one postcard. Then the affair dropped, and they never saw each other until a few weeks ago.

TOD TURNS UP.

In the intervening years Betty has changed considerably. For one thing, her father died and she could not go back to college. She qualified for a secretarial job secured a poor job, a better one, and finally a good one, working for a young lawyer with political ambitions, George Brown. Last Easter she announced her engagement to him, and went to his home town to visit his nice, prosperous, cordial family. Almost the first person she met there was Tod. He had seen in the papers that Miss Elizabeth Baker was to be the guest of the Brown family, and he "dropped around," as he expressed it, to meet the Browns and see Betty again.

Tod had changed, too. He is one of those handsome, already-slightly-swilled young men who never have jobs, but are about to get fine positions, or develop amazing opportunities to make quick money. He is airy, a little fat, cynical in a negligent amusing sort of way, and with plenty of free time to telephone Betty, come and see Betty, offer to take Betty to movies or lunch whenever she would go.

Almost the first person she met there was Tod. He had seen in the papers that Miss Elizabeth Baker was to be the guest of the Brown family, and he dropped around."

"George," writes Betty, "had left me with his mother and sisters, and we would have had a heavenly week until he came back to take me home, if it had not been for Tod. He telephoned continually; he kept coming out to see me, and he didn't hesitate to tell the Browns that he and I had been sweethearts.

He had told George, in the very beginning of our friendship that I had had a college affair, but that it was all over. I didn't tell him Tod's name. When I came home from visiting his family, George asked me why I let Tod bother me so, and when I told him who Tod was he had a funny baffled look for a moment that it makes me sick to remember. Immediately he said, 'Well, we needn't ever see him again,' but if George goes back to his home town, as is inevitable for a governor, as he hopes to do next fall, Tod will be there. What argument can I use with Tod that will convince him that I never want to lay eyes on him again? When I tried to indicate that, at Mrs. Browns', I could see he was enjoying it. He enjoyed hinting to them that he knew what I liked for breakfast and once he said, 'You sleep on your face, don't you, Betty?' and I could have killed him. He told me that he hoped to be a dear old friend of the family,' and the Brown girls rather liked him and used to ask him out to dinner while I was there.

"I know this is a very little problem among the many you hear, Betty's letter finishes. "But I am planning for an early June wedding, everything else is perfect, and yet this thing comes up to bother me over and over again. Tod said to me not to bother to ask him to the wedding, that he was coming anyway and that he had told George to throw him out! To feel that I belonged to him before I give all the love that is in me to George is spoiling everything. If I'd been widowed, or even divorced, it would be different, but Tod's amazing complacency about it, being superior to the weakness of poor little susceptible girls, is actually keeping me awake at night. I'm losing weight, and I feel sometimes I ought to break my engagement and marry Tod—he wants me to, and clear it up that way. And WHY? I never did anything I thought was wrong."

PAYING THE PIPER

No, you never did anything you thought was wrong, Betty. And sometimes does the baby who spills his bowl of porridge in his innocent little eyes do anything that he thought was wrong. But the baby goes blind through life just the same, and you are going to carry the shaming little secret until once-fascinating Tod either goes away or gets tired of teasing you.

There are rules for the safety of girlhood; there is a code. Self-control and purity and dignity make for eventual happiness, even though they do cost a little something in the giddy early years. In sex matters a girl of 18 is really a child of about six, for her interest in such subjects doesn't awaken until she is entering the teens. She seems to be a woman, with a woman's power to decide serious matters for herself, but she is really a little girl, curious and excited and ignorant as a baby lamb.

A little strength of mind, a little blind clinging to the code, at 18, brars heavy interest in happiness and self-respect in 22, and 28, and 48. And those are good years, too.

Security Has Its Dangers, Too

By Nellie McClung

Copyright Reserved

ON May 6th an Alberta woman wrote me a letter which I shall now endeavour to answer. It is a good letter, written with vigor and honesty. She says that she and a great many other women are disturbed and unsettled in their thinking. I quote the letter, in part: "A great many of us," she writes, "are all mixed up in our thinking. Desiring to be patriotic, we flew into the big pussing industry with all our hearts, and now—flop! We knitted and knitted and are now being informed by some that it is all a racket of the wool companies. We listened with horror to the tales of the German atrocities against the Jews, but have listened in vain for the news of a volunteer Jewish battalion going overseas. We do not want conscription but we do not like to see our fine Canadian boys enlist while young men of foreign extraction stand around in the streets. We enjoy hearing about your beautiful garden and of your onions and things, but we would like better to have your counsel on some of these vital topics of the day."

NOT A RACKET

I will begin with the knitting. The wool dealers have not engaged in any racket. It is true that the price of wool has gone up, but the rise in price has not been excessive. The large mills, therefore, get their English wool at the same price. Canadian wool growers are getting a better price for their wool this year than last, and the indications are that the price will continue to rise, but not unduly so. There is a Price Board in Canada carefully scrutinizing all these matters. You can always hear strange rumors about the Red Cross, the YMCA, and other bodies of unselfish and patriotic people. These rumors are entirely without foundation and I would advise you to put all such out of your mind.

You receive a clipping from one of Mr. Gardiner's speeches, in which he said this was going to be a tough year for farmers. I realize that farmers all across Canada were encouraged to go into hog raising in a big way. Then the British government decided to take 3,000,000 pounds a week of bacon from Canada, and I noticed that in this province of British Columbia, hog raising was increased about 50 per cent.

FOOD STORED UP

Mr. Gardiner points out that the warring countries have naturally stored up as much food as they could and that it probably will be a year before their supplies are exhausted; but Great Britain still takes the amount of bacon contracted for and I note now that in each Canadian city there is an effort being made by the butchers to get the Canadian people to eat more pork, and the price so far as I can make out has only been reduced one cent per pound. Yet it is not true that these spring months are the time the largest number of hogs are brought in to the abattoirs? I understand that the usual number is about 38,000 per week, but this has been increased to 56,000 and that is what is causing the surplus. Would it not be well for the farmers to hold back some of these for a month or two to equalize the supply?

PEOPLE MUST EAT

Mr. Gardiner's warning was calculated to hold back the farmers from participating in prosperity. I still think that hog raising is as safe a form of agricultural pursuit as any other. People must eat and now with Denmark in German hands, Great Britain will depend more and more upon Canada for the breakfast bacon so dear to the heart of the Old Country people. I certainly would not call the raising of pigs in Canada a flop, though certainly the high prices of the last war will not come this time, we hope. You must remember that everybody in Canada is a consumer and therefore everyone is benefited when the prices remain reasonable.

Now about the Jews. People who sneer at the Jews and spread rumors about them, are consciously or unconsciously carrying on Nazi propaganda. The Jews in Canada are enlisting in just as large a percentage as any other class of people, not forgetting the folks from Huron (Grey and Bruce (your people and mine). Anti-Semitism is a sinister thing, and we should fight against it as we fought against sow thistle on the prairie. Let us be fair. The Canadian Jews are citizens, equal in every respect to those of the other races that make up our population. They have their proportion of black sheep, as all races have, but they are loyal, intelligent, and whole-hearted in their support of the war. I can give you the Canadian statistics on the last war if you'd like to have them.

"PULLMAN" SURVEY

Now you speak of the men of foreign birth standing on the streets while our Canadian boys make their way to Europe, and here again I must warn you against hasty generalization. No one can make a correct estimate by merely looking down the street. You are like the lunching woman who some years ago made a "Pullman" survey of Canada. She saw two men brushing their hair with military brushes and she passed the men's washroom, and wrote in her notes to send home to her paper this sentence: "The habit of combs is unknown among Canadian men." When some of us wrote her in regard to this and other equally fantastic statements, she wrote back that she had seen Canadian men using brushes with her own eyes.

The men on the street, whom you say, may have been turned down by medical boards, or may not have been men engaged in some useful occupation here at home. Some Canadians are unemployable; records before you would be in a position to say whether or not the Old Canadians are finding anything.

I think I know how you came to be feeling depressed, rebellious, abused and hard-done by. You didn't arrive at this state all by yourself. You had been at a gathering, perhaps a tea. Perhaps you were the dominant spirit there. I can see it was a good meeting—everyone spoke! And when the meeting broke up, you were all convinced that the farmer was being victimized and everyone else was profiting at his expense.

Now I hope you will take a longer and wider view of this whole matter. Think of the sacrifices that some other people are making in this war. Think of the British fishermen, who go out on their boats, braving the dangers of hidden mines and swooping German planes. Think of the black-outs in England and the constant nerve wracking dangers which threaten the people there; and spend a little time also in being glad that you are alive, and be glad you are in Canada. Determine to use your money in some undoubted gifts, to help in this gigantic struggle. Remember we are all in the same boat, and no one must rock it for the sea is deep and treacherous.

I am sure that you can do a fine piece if you will study the question of refugee children. There are more than 9,400 of them in England right now, waiting for homes and transportation to come to Canada. I am sending you some literature. Call in your friends and tell them about these children. Give a talk on the whole question of refugees. There is a great deal of misapprehension on the subject. Remind them that the United Empire Loyalists were refugees, and look at what a contribution they have made to the cultural and industrial life of Canada.

TAKE REFUGE

In 1840 many liberal-minded Germans took refuge in Canada and the United States, bringing music and culture, mechanical gifts, cleanliness and thrift. We have room for many more people. If we deny the "right of asylum" to the disinherited people of Europe we will surely suffer in bitterness some day.

Around the pedestal of the Statue of Liberty, which as you know holds aloft a flaming torch to welcome all those who enter New York harbor, there is an inscription which we might ponder and accept. Not in literary only, but in deeds:

"Give me your tired, your poor,
Your huddled masses, yearning to be free;
Send these, the homeless, tempest-tossed to me.
I lift my Lamp besides a Golden Door."

While I was writing this reply to your letter I stopped to listen in the new prime minister, who says the war aim of the allies is victory, for without victory there will be no survival, and so, he concluded, "Let us go forward together!"

I want to say that is for you, and to add this word—we have ourselves in direct ratio to our efforts to save others.

I thank you for your letter and I hope you will write to me again.

Most whales, despite their large mouths, cannot swallow large objects, due to their small gullets.

Bulletin Patterns

CLASSIC STYLE BLOUSE
For Larger Sizes

Just because you wear a larger size than your daughter or sister is no reason why you shouldn't have a shirtwaist blouse, too. We have designed a charming style that can be made in either a tailored version or the softer jabot front style, and it was made just for you. The jabot simply buttons on, so if you wish you can remove it very easily. Sheer white, pastel blue or dusty rose are all lovely colors that bring out that radiant look in your face and make you feel fresh and charming. Make several of these blouses to wear now.

Style No. 3298 is designed for sizes 16, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48 and 50.

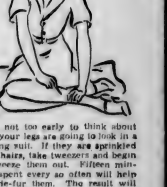

Size 36 requires 2¼ yards of 39-inch material for the sleeved blouse or short sleeved version with jabot; 3 yards of trimming.

Send the pattern. Write plainly your name, address and style number. Be sure to state size you wish. Address Pattern Department, The Edmonton Bulletin, Edmonton, Alberta.

Minute Make-Ups

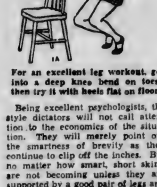

It's not too early to think about how your legs are going to look in a bathing suit. If they are sprinkled with hairs, take tweezers and begin to tweeze them out. Fifteen minutes spent every so often will help you no-fur them. The result will be more lasting, too, than other quicker methods.

Your Figure, Madame!

By IDA JEAN KAIN

As long as Paris is short on dress materials, it will be the style to wear the skirt short. It is what you might call making a fashion of necessity.

The word "short" is always comparative. Skirts are now short at 17 inches from the floor in comparison with the 14 inches that used to be considered extreme . . . there is no telling where it will all end!

For an excellent leg workout, go into a deep knee bend on toes, then try it with heels flat on floor.

Being excellent psychologists, the style dictators will not call attention to the economics of the situation. They will merely point out the smartness of brevity as they continue to clip off the inches. But no matter how smart, short skirts are not becoming unless they are supported by good pair of legs and it is no secret that the average run of legs is not what it should be.

MORE LEGWORK

The reason is that legs are underexercised. Usually the trouble is not in too much or too little fat, but in the under-development of the muscles. A good musculature gives a trimmer calf and ankle contour to any pair of legs.

Practically any sport affords excellent workouts for these leg muscles. Even tramping over a golf course is good legwork, but the legs are extremely thin, bicycling will develop a nice calf. Or you can acquire leveller limbs on the exercise mat. That is not as much fun as riding a bike, but you can do it daily and it will make a steady improvement in leg contours.

Have you ever given this old reliable a fair trial? First, lie on the back on the floor. Then, place the hands under the hips for leverage, and swing the legs—keeping the knees straight up and back overhead until the toes rest on the floor. Curl toes toward the instep and swing the legs from the hips in a scissors action for 50 counts. Keep the knees straight and point the heels hard. When you have finished, rest for a few minutes before getting back into the same position. This time with the toes pointed, for another 50 counts.

Very much the same stretching and contorting of the leg muscles is put into practice in swimming. The old flutter kick is a neat leg improver. If you can't swim worth mentioning, hang on to the rail at the pool or the rope at the beach, and kick from the hips, first pointing the toes, then the heels.

For your landlubber days, here is another exercise that will hasten the good work: Stand with one hand on the back of a chair for support and, rising on the toes, go into a deep-knee bend. Repeat very slowly five times. Rest, then try the same exercise with the heels on the floor.

Women Match Men's Skill At Golf By Right Swing

New Booklet A Guide To Game

A women golfer men admire and love to play with! Yes, golf is one sport in which women as well as men may excel. It's much good exercise, too.

And playing a good game of golf is simply a matter of learning properly. If you fail to drive as far and as accurately as you should, the chances are you do not understand the swing. You apply leverage to your club instead of really swinging.

To get the feel of a proper swing, take a handkerchief or string, tie a weight to one end and practice swinging this—starting with a small arc, which you gradually increase. Do you feel how freely you control the movement? This is the way to control your club.

Now, exert pressure on the string, anywhere between the two ends. You merely destroy the swing—proof that it's not leverage but swinging that puts maximum power behind the club head.

Other principles of golf you may learn as easily. In our new 32-page booklet, Ernest Jones, teacher of champions, tells how to hold a golf club; describes the proper stance; shows you how to swing at the ball with force and accuracy.

Send 10c in coins for your copy of "Swing's The Thing in Golf" to The Edmonton Bulletin, Edmonton, Alberta, Home Service, Booklet.

Dorothy Dix Says:

Dear Dorothy Dix: While attending school in a large city last winter my daughter, 20 years of age, met a young man nine years her senior with whom she fell violently in love. In the period of three short weeks she became engaged to him. He went to his home town and she heard from him only occasionally for a while. Then she did not hear and her letters were returned unopened. She is a business girl and makes her own money and she is planning a long, expensive trip to his home to find him. I am almost distracted, as I hate to see her ruin her whole life on one of whom she knows so little. Is there anything I can do?

A DISTRACTED MOTHER.

Answer: The only thing you can do is to quit opposing her, for every word you say just strengthens her in her determination to show you and alienate her from you at a time when she most needs your love and sympathy.

In reality, the very best thing that she can do is to go to this man's home town and find out for herself how hopeless her passion is. She must be convinced of it, and all possibility of doubt that he does not care a thing for her.

Of course, flirtations are playing with fire because there is always danger of their getting out of hand.

But it must be said in justice to the youthful philanderers that they mean no harm. It is just a game with them. Virtually part of the conversational repertoire of every boy is to call every girl he meets "beautiful."

And he doesn't expect the girl to take it seriously. He thinks she knows enough of him to take his woo at its true value, which is nothing more than pleasant patter to pass an evening with and harm done to any one and no hearts hurt.

Evidently that was about the case with the gay Lothario who made love to your daughter. The trouble is that she fell for it.

He tried to let her down as easily as he could by not writing to her and by sending her letters back unopened. But she was so obsessed by love and so ignorant of the ways of men with women, that she would not believe the truth.

It is all terribly sad and we could weep tears of pity over the poor foolish child, but there is balm in Gilead.

She recovers from her first love sickness and comes in time to laugh at it. Then, as she is older and wiser and has herself learned to play the make-believe love game, some honest lad comes along who means what he says when he tells her she is the only woman in the world for him, and she marries him.

DOROTHY DIX.

Apricots Offer New Adventure In Preserves

By MRS. GAYNOR MADDOX

Dried apricots, a good source of iron and also fine for flavor, offer the jam maker a way to extend her more expensive fruits with an addition of flavor. These recipes are new and excellent. To prepare apricots, cut them with scissors.

RED CHERRY-APRICOT CONSERVE

(Makes 6 half-pint jars)

One-fourth cup seedless raisins, 6 cups (3 lbs) prepared sour cherries, ½ cup water, 1 cup (2 ounces) dried apricots, cut in narrow strips, 2 cups water, 4 cups (1¾ lbs.) sugar, ½ teaspoon salt.

Cover raisins with hot water. Let stand 15 minutes. Drain. Wash and pit about 3 quarts sour cherries. Measure into large preserving kettle. Scrub orange, cut in quarters, remove seeds and all coarse membranes. Cut, crosswise, in very thin slices. Simmer, covered with apricots and water until orange peel is tender, stirring occasionally.

Add to cherries, bring to a boil and cook 10 minutes longer. Add sugar and salt. Cook slowly until consistency is reached, stirring frequently. Skim. Pour into clean, hot, sterilized glasses or jars and seal at once. The apricots keep cherry flavor mild and give good consistency.

RED RASPBERRY-APRICOT JAM

(Eight half-pint jars)

One and one-third cups (¼ lb) dried apricots, cut in narrow strips, 9 cups (2¼ lbs.) prepared red raspberries, 8 cups (2 lb. 10 oz.) sugar, ½ teaspoon salt.

Wash apricots, cover with cold water. Let stand overnight, or bring to boil and simmer covered for 15 minutes. Drain. Pick over and wash about 3 quarts fully ripe raspberries. Measure into large preserving kettle. Add apricots, sugar and salt. Cook slowly until sugar is dissolved and mixture boils, stirring constantly. Boil rapidly, until clear and desired consistency is reached, stirring frequently. Skim. Pour into clean, hot, sterilized glasses or jars and seal at once.

Monday's Menu

Breakfast: Bananas and dates, dry cereal, half bran muffins, red raspberry-apricot jam, coffee, milk.

Luncheon: Cream of pea soup, toasted wholewheat rolls, applesauce cake, cheese, tea, milk.

Dinner: Breaded veal chops, tomato sauce, green peppers, mashed potatoes, brussels sprouts, pineapple upside down cake, whipped cream, coffee, milk.

Sonnysayings

Church News

CHURCH NEEDED DURING WARTIME MEETING IS TOLD

VANCOUVER, June 1. — The church will be needed every hour of wartime and two hundred fold when the war is over, Rev. W. C. Smalley of Edmonton, veteran missioner and secretary of the Baptist Union of Western Canada, told delegates to the 13th annual convention of Baptist churches of British Columbia here last night.

"The world has never before seen carnage to equal that of the past few days," he said. "The Nazi wave has threatened the very foundation of the Christian church but the work shall go on.

"Loyalty to Christ and a militant Christianity are essential," he said. Church-goers who attempt to live unto themselves alone be branded as a "fifth column" practicing a harmful pacifism.

"We have to get out and fight for Christ," he said. "Let us send out people who are big-hearted and courageous, who will be anchors to those about them in these dark days."

SPIRITUALISTS MEET

Rev. Ellen Lowe of Toronto will be the speaker at the City Temple of Spiritualism at 7:30 p.m. Sunday. Psychometry will be the subject of the meeting next Friday at 8 p.m.

Preacher

RABBI J. EISEN who will share the Knox United church pulpit Sunday evening in discussing the Fifth Column.

OLD TIMERS ATTEND CHURCH

Annual church service of the Northern Alberta Pioneers and Old-timers' Association is scheduled for Sunday, June 2, at 7.30 p.m. in Metropolitan United church, South Edmonton.

Rev. R. McElroy Thompson, pastor of the church, will deliver the special sermon and will be assisted by Rev. Alex Stewart, association chaplain.

A large section of seats have been reserved for association members and their families. Mr. Thompson is himself an oldtime resident of this district.

Services of the association have been conducted each year for several years, with selection of a different denomination made each year. Last year services were held at All Saints Pro-Cathedral Anglican church

TIMELY SERMONS AT ROBERTSON

Rev. J. Gordon Brown, minister of Robertson United church, will occupy his pulpit at both services Sunday. His theme at the 11 a.m. service will be "When Life Threatens" and at 7:30 p.m. he will speak on, "Life and Christ."

At the morning service the anthem "Even Me" will be sung and W. J. Angus will be the soloist

The anthem, "As Torrents in Summer" will be sung at the evening service. A vocal trio will be sung by Misses Margaret and Alice Gordon and Marion Williams.

The music will be under direction of G. A. Kevan, organist and choirmaster.

PRESBYTERIANS TO BE ACTIVE

Presbyterian churches throughout this city have arranged timely services for Sunday, when congregations will hear sermons of special interest at this time.

At First Presbyterian, Rev. Dillwyn T. Evans of Killam, will occupy the pulpit of both services on Sunday. Music will be under direction of Henry Atack.

Rev. Percy D. Roxburgh, minister of St. Andrew's Presbyterian will preach at both services.

At Strathcona Presbyterian the 11 a.m. service will be featured by an address by Mrs. W. D. Hildred, the service being dedicated to the Women's Missionary Society. A Young People's Society service will be held at 7:30 p.m. Divine worship is to be held at Westminster at 11 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. with W. L. Clow in charge.

Rev. William Simons will preach at the one service to be held at Rupert street church at 11 a.m.

WORLD STRUGGLE SERMON SUBJECT

Rev. A. K. McMinn, the minister of McDougall United church will raise the question on Sunday morning concerning the present world struggle "If This Be Armageddon, What?"

He will clarify the meaning of the word "Armageddon" in terms of its history and will outline the characteristics of that prophetic and final world struggle in the light of immediate happenings allowing his congregation to judge for themselves as to whether this war is Armageddon, what the outcome must be and what is the most strategic thing we can do in the circumstances.

At the evening hour of worship there will be a special service featuring the Cheerio Girls in Training organization and program. The girls will attend with their mothers in a body and one of their number will assist their leaders in the service.

Railroaders To Feature Service

Members of the various railroad unions are expected to join together with the ladies of their auxiliaries, will attend the annual memorial services of the unions in First Baptist church, 102 street, and 102 avenue, on Sunday, June 9, at 7:30 p.m.

The minister of First Baptist, Rev. Dr. Young will occupy the pulpit at both services.

His morning theme will be "Deeds Not Words" and at the 7:30 p.m. service he will speak on "Living Consistently."

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"Ancient and Modern Necromancy, alias Mesmerism and Hypnotism, Denounced" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon at all Christian Science churches on Sunday. The golden text is Jeremiah 20:13. One of the Scriptural citations is "Awake to righteousness, and sin not; for some have not the knowledge of God: I speak this to your shame." (I Corinthians 15:34). One of the correlative passages from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, is, "In a world of sin and sensuality hastening to a greater development of power, it is wise earnestly to consider whether it is the human mind or the divine Mind which is influencing one" (p. 82).

Fifth Column At Knox Church

Rabbi J. Eisen and Dr. MacDonald will be in the pulpit on Sunday night to speak on the urgent question of the fifth column. An interpretation from the Jewish and the Christian standpoint will emphasize justice and peace. We must begin to live our mutual life now if we are to win the peace. Wilma Sutherland will be the soloist and a hearty welcome is extended to the general public.

Metropolitan To Welcome Children

Special services will be held at Metropolitan, Sunday, June 2. In the morning there will be children's day service, when the junior choir of 80 voices, under the direction of Mrs. James Aubridge, with R. Couper at the organ, will be heard.

In the evening the Old Timers' Association of Edmonton will attend church in a body. Mr. Thompson will preach, and Miss Audrey Hainstock will be the soloist.

Lutherans Will Gather Sunday

Central Lutheran church, of which Rev. C. S. Lystig is minister, will be active Sunday ministering to its congregation. English services only are being held.

At 10 a.m. there will be Sunday school and at 11 a.m. morning worship with the subject being, "Christ Is My Strength."

At 7:30 p.m. there will be evening service.

What To Do

I have been invited to go on a week-end motor trip with friends and wish you would tell me how to share the expenses and also what clothing I will need. When I mentioned expenses, my friends said we could take care of them as we went along, which seemed very indefinite to me. This is my first experience and I want to do the correct thing.

MISS E. M. G.

Answer—You are very wise to make a definite arrangement about the sharing of expenses before you start on the trip. You should offer to share the running expenses of the automobile and your share of the expense of hotels and meals. The question of luggage is also important. Don't take more than your share. Wear clothes that will be suitable when you stop at restaurants and hotels, which will reduce your requirements to a few personal belongings. And lastly, don't get to feeling that you have taken place in your seat for the entire trip. Be accommodating and ready to adapt yourself cheerfully to whatever situations arise.

New Books At Public Library

Among new books added to Edmonton Public Library shelves this week are the following:

Non-fiction: "Sun Never Sets," by Malcolm Muggeridge; "Which Way, Democracy?" by Wilfred Parsons; "Wheat Economy," by G. E. Britnell; "Consumer Goods," by E. Reich and C. J. Siegler.

"Your Career in Agriculture," by H. P. Andersen; "Delectable Dinners," by J. Peterson and N. W. Badenoch; "Party Book," by Mary J. Breen; "Baltic Roundabout," by Bernard Newman; "Roumania Under King Carol," by Hector Bolitho.

"Good Old Days," by David L. Cohn; "So You're Seeing New England," by Clara E. Laughlin; "I Married Adventure," by Osa Johnson; "Knife and Life in India," by T. Howard Somervell; "Here Lies Goebbels," by Vernon McKenzie.

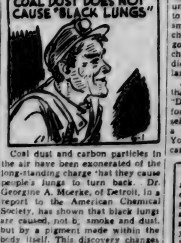

Fiction: "Wolves Against the Moon," by J. Allbrook; "Take Courage," by Phyllis Bentley; "Valiant Heart," by George Blake; "Mr. Freed Investigates," by Ladbroke Black; "Hangman's Whip," by Mignon G. Eberhart.

"Castle in Carinthia," by Johan Fabricius; "Paris Gazette," by Leon Feuchwanger; "Mariana," by Sally Salminen; "Strife Before Dawn," by Mary Schurman; "Wedding Guest; Sat On a Stone," by Richard Shattuck.

Church President

REGINA, June 1.—Rev. Harry Joyce, minister of St. Andrew's church here, Thursday was named president of the Saskatchewan conference of the United Church in Canada. He succeeded Rev. T. H. Sendall of Moose Jaw.

Debunker

Coal dust and carbon particles in the air have been exonerated of the long-standing charge that they cause people's lungs to turn back. Dr. Georgine A. Mierke, of Detroit, in a report to the American Chemical Society, has shown that black lungs are caused, not by smoke and dust, but by a pigment made within the body itself. This discovery changes the whole conception regarding "anthracosis" — so-called miners' black lungs."

Major And Minor Notes

By John Oliver

As June arrives, many music students look forward to the latter part of the month, when examinations will be held and when school books and volumes of Beethoven sonatas, Chopin preludes, harmony books and other requisites of a year of study will be laid aside. Those who are taking examinations, musical and otherwise, are on the home stretch.

John Oliver

Of the academic year and will increase the pressure of their work until the final post is passed. Then will come a two-months lay-off, with just enough study to keep "the hand in." Some teachers and pupils will take "master" or "refresher" courses to improve their status, while others will take as much relaxation as possible. Music studios throughout the city are humming with activity and it is to be hoped that all true, meritorious work will be well rewarded.

At a recent festival held at McBride, B.C., Joan Snell, six-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Snell, formerly of this city, scored high honors, winning a cup in the piano class, having attained 95 per cent of possible marks, the highest in the festival. She was also successful in winning a first class certificate in elocution.

Down in Chicago, Noreen Bristow, young Edmonton soprano, who has been accepted as a member of the Chicago Civic Opera society chorus for next season is working hard in preparation for the opening production in December, Verdi's colorful opera, Aida. Miss Bristow recently was awarded the $200 annual scholarship of the Edmonton Civic Opera society, which will enable her to continue her studies while awaiting opening of the opera season.

• • •

Recalling that she is making her debut in Chicago in Aida, it is worth mentioning that when the San Carlo company played the Verdi masterpiece here going on two years ago, she appeared as a "super" in the cast. In the Chicago performance Martinelli and John Charles Thomas will be in the cast. Miss Bristow was one of 90 young ladies selected from 350 applicants in open competition for places in the opera chorus.

• • •

In a recent letter to Mrs. James B. Carmichael, musical director of the Edmonton Civic Opera society, Miss Bristow writes that "We have four rehearsals a week, including the two with the harp Saturday afternoon. We sing three hours with a 10-minute intermission. Also we can't miss a rehearsal or be late unless we have a very good reason. All operas are sung in the foreign language except Martha. Hansel and Gretel, and Falstaff, which we'll sing in English."

• • •

Continuing, writing of her impressions and experiences, she writes that the stage of the opera house is "Four times as large as ours at home and can be tilted to any level. The curtain in front weighs some 1,000 tons. From the stage floor to the roof is 14 stories high." She writes that the scenery storehouse covers a whole city block and relates the vast amount of costumes and equipment carried in the opera house.

• • •

She was impressed with a visit by Lily Pons, Metropolitan opera diva and her husband, Andre Kostelanetz. "She's not quite as small as I expected, but very slim," writes Miss Bristow. "Her hair, to my surprise is auburn. I liked her very much. . . . Her husband seemed like a grand person, though he set back in the corner while she came forward and we didn't notice him until Mr. Adler called him out." Miss Bristow sent regards to her friends here.

From the pen of W. D. Wraight of this city comes to hand a song entitled Sunny Alberta. Mr. Wraight is responsible for both words and music. The cover bears the following legend "Dedicated to the Commercial Grads Basketball Champions 1915-40, who through the years contributed so much to the physical welfare of the youth of this fair province." Betty Muter is credited with the piano arrangement of the song. It is a stirring call in its praise of Alberta and obviously the work of one who thoroughly enjoyed his task. The song has words that tell of many of Alberta's charms and they are set to a smooth-flowing melody that is sing and readily remembered. Mr. Wraight has several other songs to his credit, themes of which are printed on the back cover of Sunny Alberta.

Your Baby And Mine

By MYRTLE MEYER ELDRED

During childhood there are many puzzling questions which no one can answer definitely but only according to certain general principles with which mothers should be familiar.

One of these questions has to do with sleep and how much sleep is necessary. Rules for sleep are based upon the principle that growth is dependent upon three things: food, exercise and sleep. Adults whose growth is ended can do with less sleep than they get. Children can hardly get too much sleep.

During the early months of life the baby sleeps almost continually, waking only to be bathed and fed, to cry a little for exercise, and then to sleep again.

At three or four years of age the child still sleeps 12 hours at night and takes a one to three hour nap. This nap continues until the child goes to school, and though the nap is impossible the child still has an early bed hour. In fact the conscientious mother insures that even her teen age children have at least ten hours of sleep nightly.

GROWTH FOODS

Rules about foods are based on the principle that growth and development depend upon certain growth foods: milk, eggs, vegetables, fruits, whole grain cereals. All other foods are, in a sense, extras, and their loss would be no real deprivation while the loss of the growth foods is serious.

This is a somewhat lengthy preamble to the following questions which must be answered according to the above principles.

"Is it harmful for a child of five to ten years regularly to go to bed at 1 p.m. or later? Is five cents worth of candy a day harmful? Is it harmful to send a child to school without breakfast?"

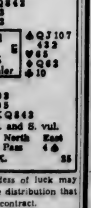

The first is a bad habit, the second might be harmless but is certainly unnecessary and might lead later to the last question. No matter how small the amount of food every child should eat something before going to school. Perhaps if the child had better sleeping hours, a diet minus all but essentials, this last would take care of itself.

Any reader interested may obtain the leaflet, "Hours of Sleep, and Diet From Five to Eight Years," for the usual three-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope sent in with a request to Mrs. Eldred of the Your Baby and Mine department in care of this newspaper.

Myrtle Meyer Eldred will answer your questions about diet, general care and management of children if you will send a three-cent stamped self-addressed envelope with your letter to Mrs. Eldred of the Your Baby and Mine department in care of The Edmonton Bulletin.

McKenney On Bridge

In today's hand Morrie Elis of New York, one of the outstanding young master players of the world, explains a point that it is well for the beginner to note. If you are in a contract which you have just one long chance to make, take that chance. The goddess of luck may favor you with the distribution that will give you the contract.

Duplicate—N. and S. vul.

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Double	Pass	4 ♦

Opening—♣K. 55

Elis sat East, and when his partner doubled the one-club bid, he felt justified in trying for four spades. South's king of clubs held the opening trick, and he made a nice shift to the ten of hearts. The ace in dummy won, and now East could see that it would be possible for him to ruff two spades, a heart and the club trick he had already lost. If the diamonds were split three-three, however, he saw one chance to make the hand. He took it.

He cashed his queen of diamonds, then led a small diamond back to dummy's ten. The fourth diamond North refused to trump, discarding a heart, and now declarer's sole hope was that South held the blank ace or king of trump. He discarded his losing heart, and you can see that if South does ruff, it will be the losing ace anyway, and the only other trick the opponents can take is the spade king. Thus East made his contract by taking the long shot.

HUNGARY PLANS TO STAND WITH 2 AXIS POWERS

BUDAPEST, June 1—The government left no doubt to observers yesterday that Hungary's policy is co-ordinated with the plans of the Rome-Berlin axis.

Premier Count Paul Teleki in an interview and Foreign Minister Count Istvan Csaky in a newspaper article affirmed that Hungary's "common interest" with Germany and Italy, as well as the mobilized Hungarian army, was a guarantee of peace in southeastern Europe.

The declarations of the premier and the foreign minister were interpreted in diplomatic circles as warnings to pro-Ally Balkan powers to remain non-belligerent.

"Great victories of the German army have made it highly probable that the war will end in a short time," said Teleki.

Csaky wrote that army units had been put on a war footing since it is "conceivable that shots later may be fired in this part of Europe."

Nazis Take Blood From Children To Use For Wounded

PARIS, June 1.—The Paris office of the Polish information service, a department of the exiled Polish government, yesterday said that German soldiers are taking blood from children in occupied Poland for transfusion to German wounded on the front.

It added that since the beginning of May the drawing of blood occurred in "a cruel and brutal" operations which "many under-nourished children have not survived."

Agriculture Co-Op Marketing Act To Undergo Changes

OTTAWA, June 1.—Without opposition or debate the House of Commons last night adopted a resolution approving amendments to the Agricultural Products Co-Operative Marketing Act, 1939, and gave first reading to a bill based upon it. The amending act is designed to provide for agreements with co-operative associations and associations, and to provide also for the calculation and payment of liabilities of the minister under any agreement, and for payment of administrative expenses.

Mother To Hundreds In Child Welfare Work Is Now Taking A Holiday

By FRANCOISE MARTIN

"Mother" to hundreds of boys and girls from all parts of the province during the past 17 years, Mrs. Marion Cross, of 10050 114 street, brought to a close this month nearly two decades of invaluable service to the youth of Alberta. Working as a "boarding mother" in co-operation with the child welfare branch of the provincial department of public health since 1923, Mrs. Cross will leave early next week for the Pacific coast, where she will visit for some time and enjoy a well-earned rest.

"Mother Cross" chatting with a reporter Saturday, told of her experiences in assisting the provincial government to rebuild delinquent youths.

In 1922, the Alberta government inaugurated a system of "boarding mothers" to take over the task of trying to reform boys and girls outside of institutions. Mrs. Cross, who comes from the highlands of Scotland, was among the first to volunteer her services and with energy and aggressiveness, coupled with a kindly nature, she succeeded where others failed.

"They were not 'bad' boys," she said, pointing out that their home lives had not been conducive to right living. "Often, the lives of those about them were not helpful examples," she said, "the boys were allowed to roam the streets and get into bad company without intent, and gradually without realizing their errors, and with the indifference of their parents, the boys got into trouble and were convicted of petty crimes."

GIVEN A CHANCE

Minor crimes might have been the prelude to greater criminal acts, she said, had not the boys been put on probation and given a chance to find their way back to a decent standard of living. Mrs. Cross called attention to the fact that Alberta is the only province in Canada which can boast: "We have no reform schools for delinquent boys."

Since she accepted her position, Mrs. Cross has "adopted" some 1,400 boys and girls, mothered them, given them a real home and kept them off the streets, taught them, with patience and kindness, the difference between right and wrong, and helped them to regain ambition, courage and self-confidence.

Sheltering at one time as many as 20 delinquent youths ranging in age from 7 to 18, she has earned their gratitude and has received scores of letters written by "her boys," thanking her for her care and guidance when they most needed it.

NO COMPLAINTS

None of the boys and girls she has aided has "got into trouble again" since they left her home, she said. "While they were with us at my home on 114th street, I have never received any complaints of their conduct," she said, "though they have been with me at little time as four months or as long as wour years." The boys have come from all parts of the province and one from as far as Toronto.

One boy whom she aided through a period of maladjustment now holds a responsible position in the police force in London, England. And there remain hundreds more boys and girls who will not forget the aid she has given them.

Mrs. Cross paid high tribute to the work of T. R. Blaine, child Welfare superintendent; Charles

Foster Mother

MRS. MARION CROSS, who has been working for nearly 20 years with the child welfare branch of the provincial government as a "boarding mother." Now she plans to take a holiday.

99,628 PIECES WAR SUPPLIES SENT OVERSEAS

Alberta division of the Canadian Red Cross Society has shipped 312 cases containing 99,628 articles of war supplies and 3,-676 articles for Polish and Finnish relief, together with 75,924 surgical dressings for sterilization to Montreal and Toronto to be forwarded overseas, it was reported Saturday by D. H. Tomlinson, provincial commissioner.

Included in the articles are socks, pyjamas, sweaters, scarves, gloves, wristlets, mitts, pneumonia jackets, Hampton pads, bed pads, bed pan covers, abdominal binders, bed gowns, pillow cases, sheets, T bandages, surgical towels, sling binders, hot water bag covers, ice bag covers, dressing gowns, surgeons gowns and many types of surgical dressings.

B. Hill, his assistant, and Miss Violet Manarey, probation officer of the provincial department of public health for their work in re-adjusting delinquent boys and girls. "They have done commendable work in investigating the cases, providing clothing for the youngsters and finding jobs for them whenever possible. Their work has been a tremendous factor in the rebuilding of the boys and girls who were products of unfortunate environment," she said.

And "Mother Cross" has taken no small part in the work of reforming juvenile delinquents in Alberta. It has been a big task and one well and kindly handled in her 17 years of service now brought to a close. Her boys and girls will not forget her.

Nine appeals from conviction on criminal charges and 10 civil appeals are listed for hearing at sittings of the Alberta appeal court which opens on Monday at the court house.

Salary Deductions Step Proposed For War Savings Plan

Unanimous decision to take on the work of promoting and organizing co-operative war saving plans between employers and employees was made by Edmonton's Life Insurance Underwriters at a meeting held Friday at the Macdonald hotel under the chairmanship of Robert Hill, branch manager, Dominion Life Insurance Co., Ltd.

A special committee with R. E. Staples, North American Life Assurance Co., as chairman, was set up. Other members of the committee are R. E. Frizzell, Imperial Life Assurance Co., first vice-chairman, and C. H. Leppard, superintendent, Prudential Insurance Co., second vice-chairman.

The members of this organization will act as service men to assist in setting up the employer-employee scheme of war savings through voluntary wage deductions. This saving scheme was outlined by Donald Ferguson, Winnipeg, organizer of the war savings certificate drive for the prairie provinces.

PLEDGE SERVICE

Approximately 30 Edmonton insurance men attended the meeting and pledged their services in aiding the drive.

Mr. Ferguson said that an endeavor is being made to sell every employer in Canada the idea of making it possible for his employees to participate in war savings certificate purchases by a system of salary deductions.

The complete plan for handling these deductions has been worked out and has been made as simple as possible. The work of the newly-organized group will be to discuss and outline the co-operative plan with employers and employees alike.

CALL TO ALL CITIZENS

John Burns, Calgary, provincial chairman for Alberta of the war savings certificate committee, also attended the meeting. He pointed out that in this drive Canada is calling to all its citizens to share the burden of the war and that the war savings certificate scheme has been worked out as a means of mobilizing even the smallest amounts of savings for Canada's war effort.

Any employer in Edmonton having questions or desiring assistance in setting up these war savings pay deduction plans are requested to get in touch with Mr. Staples, or any other member of his committee.

No Provincial Tax On War Certificates

Exemption of interest accumulation or capital appreciation on Dominion government war savings certificates, from provincial income tax, was announced Saturday by Hon. Solon E. Low, provincial treasurer. An enabling orde-in-council has been passed, Mr. Low stated. The certificates bear interest at three and one half per cent.

In announcing that the capital appreciation or interest accumulation on these certificates would be waived in collection of provincial income tax, Mr. Low said that the province was anxious to facilitate in every way possible, the Dominion war effort and it was believed this exemption would encourage purchase of the certificates.

$500 LIMIT

In a secondary way, Mr. Low stated that there was a difficulty in computing the tax owing to the small amounts involved and the restricted extent to which they could be purchased. He pointed out that no individual could purchase more than $500 worth of certificates in one year.

Mr. Low recalled that the Dominion government had made similar exemptions of the certificates and it was highly desirable for the province to assist in every possible way.

The Inquiring Reporter

THE QUESTION

The haughty disregard of pedestrian safety displayed by a certain type of motorist prompted the Inquiring Reporter today to seek opinions on the cause of these drivers showing such wanton disregard for their own and others' safety.

THE ANSWERS

SAM NEELANDS, salesman: With some drivers it is just a foolish pride taken in passing cars.

• • •

JACK DAWSON, war veteran: The fierce hurry displayed by some motorists is an exaggerated opinion of the importance of his own time. He dashes along the streets in a horrible hurry to get somewhere of no consequence five minutes faster. Hence the trail of death and destruction.

• • •

FREDDIE FRANKS, salesman: The competitive spirit of the age is one of the factors which actuate the motorist who speeds along the highway or city streets at an excessive speed.

• • •

TOM SMITH, court house orderly: It is just plain discourtesy, and a total disregard for the rights of others that is the main cause for motorists speeding.

• • •

FRED JENNINGS, carpenter: I think the reason is that a bird thinks because he has a car that will give him fast going when he calls on it to do so is showing himself to be a fine superior personage by driving faster than other people who are content to obey city bylaws and travel at the proper limit for the city.

AROUND THE TOWN

Prof. E. H. Strickland, professor of entomology at the University of Alberta, will address the Kiwanis club on "The Caterpillar Plague" at the luncheon meeting Monday at 12:30 noon at the Macdonald hotel.

Dr. W. H. Hill, Calgary health officer, will be one of the examiners for the Dominion Medical Council examinations to be held at the University of Alberta on Monday and Tuesday.

R.C.M.P. are co-operating with city police in the search for the author of the pamphlet "Is there a fifth column in Edmonton?" which charges that prominent citizens are of German nationality and sympathy. Police officials state the pamphlet constitutes criminal libel.

John Vallance, Regina, superintendent of water services under Prairie Farm Rehabilitation Administration, is a visitor in Edmonton to confer with local officials on staff reorganization made necessary by curtailment of the federal vote for water service projects.

To take over duties as district passenger agent for the C.N.R. in Edmonton and district, S. M. Greene, formerly district passenger agent at Winnipeg, arrived in Edmonton Friday. He succeeds T. W. McDonough, who is being transferred to Jasper Park as passenger department general agent.

Political events in the United States, which have resulted in J. H. R. Cromwell, until recently U. S. ambassador to Canada, becoming a candidate for the U. S. Senate has necessitated the cancellation of tentative arrangements made for him to address a joint meeting of the Canadian Club and the Edmonton Chamber of Commerce here early in June.

Two new Edmonton companies have been incorporated in this province, it was announced Saturday by provincial government officials. One company is the Central Printers and Stationers Ltd., capitalized at 20,000 shares of no par value. The incorporators are Mrs. Nora Murray, widow, of 9934 109 street, and Leo Gaulher, printer, of 10010 109 avenue. The company proposes to carry on a general printing, publishing, book-binding and stationery business. The other company incorporated is General Automotive and Hardware Supplies Ltd., capitalized at $20,000, divided into 20,000 shares of $1 each.

Through The Mill

Any other request but the one he made would possibly have been productive of results more pleasant to the accused, but we all live and learn, or do we? Well, the vagrant thought he would make a last desperate effort to improve a really hopeless looking situation by asking the court for "time to get out of the city." Now if there's one thing that a cadi has in large quantities it is time—other people's time. He is also the most obliging fellow in the world in this matter of leaving the city. There are no jails or penitentiaries in Edmonton.

• • •

"You'll leave the city all right and I also can arrange the matter of time. Four months in Fort Saskatchewan jail at hard labor," said the court. The obvious moral in this little occurrence over at the school of salutory action is: don't ask a magistrate for time and never, never, couple such a request with one to leave the city.

• • •

Record of the accused was both long and sad. Shoplifting, drunkenness and conduct inconsiderable in the university of his fellowmen had brought long and numerous jail terms, stretching away back through the mists of the years.

• • •

Some of the boys on the docket must have thought it was a sort of bargain Saturday for a plain, ordinary drunk asked "for time to raise the money to pay his fine." He offered to work hard for it. Again the cadi showed that he can oblige every time under such circumstances. "You'll have an opportunity to work out the fine if you can't raise the money. You'll have 30 days in Fort Saskatchewan at hard labor," was the very reasonable settlement suggested. As a matter of fact the court pointed out that he is not permitted by law, even if he feels so disposed, to give a person convicted of intoxication, time to raise fine money.

Charged with obtaining possession of an auto through false pretences and of theft of a quantity of tools, Keith Greenwood had his case set over until next week when he appeared before Magistrate Miller in police court Saturday. Bail was granted in two sureties of $250. Norman Blue is defending accused. The auto in question is alleged to have been stolen from Herman Albert of this city.

Citizen Recalls German 1914 March On Belgium: But They Marched Back

As a lad of nine, Karl Houba, 105 Condell Block, stood on a bridge spanning the river Maas on the Dutch-Belgian-German frontier in the city of Maastricht, Holland, and watched the dust clouds rise from the long columns of the Kaiser's army on the march toward Brussels.

He listened, quivering with boyish excitement, intermingled with fear, to the boom of the German 42 centimeter howitzers and the terrifying crash of bursting shells as they pounded the forts of Liege, only 15 miles to the south, into a shapeless mass of twisted steel and concrete rubble.

Well does he remember, too, the scene when darkness fell, and to the hideous clamor was added the lurid flashes of gun fire and the death-dealing blaze of the exploding shells.

TATTERED REMNANTS

But the German kaiser of 1914 was more merciful than Adolf Hitler of 1940, and although Holland felt the pinch of war in many ways, no blood drenched the soil of the Netherlands and after more than four years of youth, Karl stood on the same bridge and watched a taciturn rabble in tattered field grey trudge wearily and dispiritedly back, the remnants of what had once been a proud conquering army, moving eastward.

Helmets, revolvers and military equipment of all kinds were sold for a few coins to the Dutch youngsters, who sneaked across the border in those exciting days to watch the returning troops.

Houba says Hitler's army will suffer the same fate.

Several years later Houba joined the Dutch army and secured a lieutenant's commission. He served for three years in the armed forces and then came to Canada.

But a short time ago the German hordes were on the march toward Brussels again. But this time they took a short cut through Holland. Across the very bridge on which the youthful Karl stood 25 years ago the swift motorized units of Hitler's war machine raced in the blitzkrieg of 1940.

And it was this bridge and a new, modern span, close by, that the retreating Dutch, through either treachery or bungling, failed to destroy, permitting the Hitler war machine to move with great speed through Belgium and outflank the courageous but badly outnumbered Dutch army.

Houba wired the Dutch consul general for western Canada at Winnipeg asking for instructions as a reserve officer of the Netherlands. He's still ready to serve.

Remembers 1914

KARL HOUBA, of Edmonton and a native of The Netherlands, who as a boy of nine watched the Kaiser's army march to Brussels. Four years later he saw the tattered remnants of the defeated army march back again. Hitler's legions will suffer the same fate, he declares.

CAST OF CHARACTERS

ROSSY McAFEE—went to college to play baseball, get an education, and settle a feud.

JUDY TOLLIVAR—daughter of Lincoln College's president.

HANNAH SHRIDER—hillbilly girl followed Rossy to college.

YESTERDAY: Dr. Tollivar arranges for Hannah to stay in school, room at another place. When Rossy goes to see her, she tells him how his cousin, Steve Hogg, came down to school, spied on Rossy, then reported back that he was living with the Tollivars. She reminds Rossy of his oath to avenge his father, denounces him, sinks him sprawling.

CHAPTER IV

THE terrific impact of Hannah Shrider's hand on Rossy McAfee's face left a glowing, four-pronged picture on his amazed and bloodless cheek. He wallowed a moment on the floor, where he had fallen after the girl slapped the fire out of him. He gulped, started to rise. Murder ran through his arteries and muscles. "You—you—I'll knock the tar out of you—"

Hannah made ready to meet him blow for blow. "Knock the tar out of me, dad-burn your low-life time! Just come on and knock the tar out of me!"

Rossy looked up at the passion-set face of the girl he had once asked to marry him. He remembered that day in the spring when the orchard trees were pink and white and the bland wind waved her tawny hair.

Rossy and Hannah had been sweethearts—and enemies—up from their childhood. Both families had known all along in time they would marry. Rossy had never given thought to anything else, nor had Hannah. At least not until this moment, though they had fought as often and as hard as they had hugged and kissed.

Anger went out of him. He got clumsily to his feet, and stood just staring at her. The commotion of their scrap brought a heavy figure to the door, and there stood Mrs. Patterson.

"Well, of all things!" the horrified lady cried, seeing what had just happened. She advanced upon Hannah. "Fighting! Quarreling! And you have only got here. Who ever heard of such goings on? I'm a mind to send you away, not let you stay another moment in my house—with all my nice girls—"

"It was my fault," Rossy said. "Blame it on me, not her. I reckon it'll take me a little time to act like white folks."

"I'll report you to Dr. Tollivar, sir!" Mrs. Patterson promised grimly.

Rossy picked up his hat from the floor and clamped it on his head. "I'll be seeing you," he said mechanically.

Hannah bawled, "I don't want never to see you again, Rossy McAfee!"

He turned upon her. "Them's the death-bed words of all the gals that make up the world's mess of old maids." He added with a sneer, "But I reckon you'd like to see our dear Cousin Steve Hogg again! He's got money that's never been spent!"

Hannah came right back. "Yes, and he asked me to marry him, too, and at least he wouldn't two-time me every time I turned my back a minute!"

• • •

Rossy knew this led to a renewal of the battle. He went sadly out and stood looking up at the stars. Mrs. Patterson would report this to Dr. Tollivar first thing in the morning. The two of them would be dragged on the carpet almost before they had got settled in school. If it got out—and how could it be kept!—he and Hannah would be the laughing stock of the student body, and then he would have to kill somebody to shut the stuff up.

With these gloomy reflections for companionship he made his way back to the big house. He walked slowly, wishing he had somewhere else to go.

Judy was just finishing a telephone conversation when he slipped in. She hung up and stopped him. "Rossy."

"Yes'm." Rossy slipped into a chair with a hard bottom.

"Come over here on the sofa." When he reluctantly complied, she examined him with that odd smile of hers. There was amusement in it and also something else he did not understand. "I have just been talking with Mrs. Patterson."

Rossy gave a start. "She told you, I reckon."

Rossy tried to think of something nice to say about this, but all he could think of was, "Yes'm."

"There wouldn't be any point in making it a matter for the administrative council," she went on, curling her legs under her, "but you don't want to fight like that, Rossy."

"Yes'm. I mean, no'm."

"You're in school now. You came to get an education. You want to be a gentleman. You want to acquire a certain amount of—well, culture. That is, you want to get the rust knocked off. Make yourself into somebody. Don't you, Rossy?"

"I reckon so," he admitted grudgingly.

"Of course, you do. That's why you're here at all. And you want to play baseball, maybe become a great pitcher and work your way up to the big leagues, and all that, but even so you want to amount to something, become a somebody. Isn't that right, Rossy?"

He gulped. "Yes'm."

"Well, brawling with your sweetheart won't start you off in the direction you plan to go—"

"She ain't my sweetheart any more."

"You mean you two broke off—"

"Not just now, but it will amount to that in the end."

"Rossy, are you sure you would want to do that—"

• • •

There was a moment of silence between them, during which she continued to look at him, watch him, but gravely and no longer with amusement. Then she did what to Rossy was a startling thing — she moved over and took his hand.

"You don't want to break off with your sweetheart over so slight a thing as—well, a little spat—you want to be broad-minded, at least try to learn to be broad-minded—"

"I hope you don't call being smacked flat a slight thing!"

"No, but brawling and fighting like that is small!"

He kept sitting there, liking the touch of Judy's hand, trying to feel through his emotions to her real meaning. She gave his hand a pat and released it.

"You see, Rossy, father knew all the while you had something to you. When Coach Hurd went up in Hell'n-Damnation to look you over, saw you play ball last summer, and came back and reported to daddy about you, we all had faith enough in you to work out a way for you to come to college. You don't know it, but you were the subject of a lot of discussion in our home as far back as last July."

"Was I?" he asked, studying her in bewilderment. "I never knew that."

"I'm telling you now because you have to make good to make our faith come true."

He sat there turning this in mind. Finally he turned to her. "Let me ask you something."

"Go ahead. If I can answer your question I will."

"Was your paw ever up in Hell'n-Damnation Holler?"

• • •

Only for an instant did any change come into her expression. It was so little as a flicker of her long lashes.

"Why, I suppose so, Rossy. When he came to be president of Lincoln College he covered just about all the territory in this end of the state. He felt he should travel over his territory so as to know the people who would come to his school. I think he visited your neighborhood, too."

"I don't mean that way. I mean did he—"

"Did he what?" she prompted him.

"Did he ever live up in there?"

"My father? Why, no. I can't think of his ever living in Hell'n-Damnation Holler. If you're asking whether he is a relative of the family of Tollivars up in your country, the feuding Tollivars your family have been traditionally at outs with, no. How could we be?"

"Er—well—"

"Can't you see how absurd that would all be? My father a member, of a feud clan, and his being president of one of the best colleges in the mountain country? That wouldn't make sense, would it?"

She was leaning forward persuasively, and her very anxiety for him to accept the absurdity put him on his guard. Cousin Steve Hogg would have said, "She's mealy-mouthing you. She's sneaking up on your blind side. She's trying to ketch you in a left-handed pyoint and hog tie you." Something in Rossy believed that too. And he knew what Hannah would say, and his mother—all his kinfolks.

"My father has always been in school work," that sweet, determined voice went on. "Ever since I can remember. He was principal of a big high school, then he went to the university and we lived there four years while father finished his master's and took his doctor's degree. He was a professor of education two years in a northern college."

"That was before my mother died. Then this place called him. Naturally the board of trustees would examine carefully the whole history of a man before they put him in a responsible job like this. Well, they gave him the presidency of Lincoln College. He has always been a fine, clean man. For me he's a great man, Rossy."

But for Rossy he was the man who killed his father.

EMPLOYERS OF FEMALE HELP BUY UNIFORMS

New Regulations Governing Restaurant Workers Effective June 30

Effective as from June 30 next revised regulations governing the minimum wages of female employees in restaurants will come into effect, according to Clayton Adams, chairman of the Alberta Industrial Regulations Board.

A feature of the revision is that employers will provide uniforms or special articles of wearing apparel required of female employees.

The clause in the order of the Board on this point is as follows:

"When an employer requires his employees to wear a uniform or any special article of wearing apparel, such uniform or special article of wearing apparel shall be furnished, repaired and laundered, free of cost to the employee, by the employer and no deductions shall be made from the wages of the employee for the furnishing, repairing or laundering of such uniform or special article of wearing apparel."

Hours of work for female employees are fixed at not more than eight hours a day and 48 hours in the week.

After three months experience a female employee must be paid not less than the minimum wage of $12.50 a week.

In case an employer employs inexperienced female employees, not in excess of 25 per cent of the total number of all female persons ordinarily employed, except when the total number is less than four, in which case inexperienced employees may be taken on, rates of pay are: $9 a week for the first month: $10 a week for the second month and $11 a week for the third. After this period, the minimum wage of $12.50 must be paid.

Part time employees shall receive 30 cents an hour with a minimum of four hours pay or $1.20 on each occasion on which such an employee is required to report for duty.

Provision also is made for overtime pay.

LACOMBE BULL BRINGS RECORD PRICE AT SALE

Government-Bred Animal Sells For Top Price In Age Class

Sale of the champion bull at the Lacombe sale for a record price for an animal of this age, Saturday drew forth warm praise for Alberta breeders and great personal satisfaction from Hon. D. B. Mullen, minister of agriculture.

The outstanding feature of the sale was the record price of $500 for the champion Angus bull, Bandolier Blackcap, bred by the Alberta agriculture department at the Vermilion farm and contributed to the sale by Thomas Henderson & Son, Lacombe.

The young bull, one year old, is reported by judges to be "an outstanding animal" and was purchased by J. Dobinson & Sons, Clive.

He was sired by Bandolier's New Deal 2nd, the herd bull purchased in 1938 by Mr. Mullen from John W. Auman & Sons, Marian, Iowa.

Mr. Mullen stated that he expected a number of bulls in Iowa before selecting Bandolier and believed his breeding would help to improve Angus cattle in Alberta.

The young bull at Lacombe was the first offspring of the imported bull offered at a public sale and Mr. Mullen expressed himself as being gratified with the result.

The foundation herd of Aberdeen Angus females was placed on the provincial farm at Vermilion by special arrangement with 12 Aberdeen Angus breeders. The breeder donated a female to the department and in return receives a young bull, sired by the imported bull. Mr. Henderson donated a cow and under the arrangement received the bull calf which was sold for $500. Mr. Dobinton & Sons will have the benefit of the high class animal to head their herd at Clive.

"This herd at Vermilion is a credit not only to Alberta, but to the whole of Canada," said Mr. Mullen.

Sailors' Queer Lingo Puzzles Scribe When They Visit On Leave

"We get along fine with the 'pigeons' but we sure scrap with those 'pongos' and 'juicers.' . . . conversation of a couple of visitors to Edmonton.

No, there wasn't an influx of refugees, but the talk sounded like a foreign language.

In fact, it was foreign to the reporter who heard it, so he just listened awhile and didn't ask questions.

The navy was in town for a spell of leave this week and the talk of these young "Mallies" (this means sailors) was a bit above the level of the ordinary landlocked citizen.

"Come on, let's go for a wet," one of the tars said after a bit of unintelligible chatter. Even this didn't make sense until he said, "Hoist one." Then it began to be clearer.

GO FOR A "WET"

The reporter and two young sailors, both non-commissioned officers who understood each other perfectly, although one came from duty at the Pacific and the other from Halifax, sauntered off to "go for a wet."

"Who are the pongos and the pigeons?" the scribe asked over the foam. (That sounds a bit like sailing).

"Oh, we have our own names for nearly everything in the navy," one of them explained, scanning the horizon over his beer elbow.

"The pigeons are air force men and they're all right, but the pongos—they're soldiers—we just don't get along with them. We fight with them all the time and we sure fill them in."

"You what?"

"Fill them in—beat them up."

WHO ARE "JUICERS"?

"Well," another question, "who are the juicers?"

"Oh, they're English sailors—the Royal Navy."

"Sure." the other sailor explained. "they think they can look down on us, think they are better sailors than we are, but we can beat the tar out of them in a fight."

One of the mallees raised three fingers. He was quite "tiddly." Looked very smart. That raised another question. "Tiddly" means neat—his uniform was one which he had tailored for himself. His partner was "pusser," which is "strictly navy." His uniform, very smart looking and fitting well, was "issue." "Pusser" also means strict.

"GRAVEL" IS SUGAR

"It's a little hard coming home because people don't understand you," one of them said. "One of the sailors was down at our house for dinner and when he asked for some gravel my mother's eyes stuck out an inch. I passed him the sugar.

"A few minutes later he said, 'would you pass me the smear?' I passed him the butter."

It was time for another round and up went three fingers. It turned out a torpedo, to a sailor, is a "fish."

The lieutenant who issues all the orders is "Jimmy." A fellow who can do anything is "handy."

"When a fellow is always complaining or a mooner, we say 'dry your eyes'," a further explanation went.

But the sailors don't encourage showing off. "When a fellow is always acting salty, we call him a Jack," they said. "That cools him off."

Legal Club Meets

The 13th annual dinner of the Edmonton Legal Discussion Club was held Friday evening at the Edmonton Country Club under the chairmanship of L. V. Cairns, K.C. Prizes for the best legal paper submitted to the club during the 1939 season were awarded to C. M. Macleod, of the law firm of Simpson and Macleod. The presentation was made by A. W. Miller. Special reference was made to Maj. E. B. Wilson and Maj. F. Armour Ford, members of the club, now serving overseas with the Canadian Active Service Force.

According to tests, the lifting power of an average-size mushroom is 27 pounds.

RECRUITS FOR HOME GUARD MUST REPORT

Examinations on Sunday For Recommendations For Enlistment

Intending recruits for the Alberta company of the Home Guard, whether previously registered or not, must report on Sunday, June 2, between 1 p.m. and 4 p.m. to offices of the Canadian Legion, the Canadian Corps Association, Army and Navy Vets or the British Imperial Comrades Association, it was announced Saturday.

On reporting at any one of these offices, the applicants will be examined for recommendation for enlistment by officers of these associations.

Lt.-Col. E. Brown, M.M., E.D., Area Commandant, presided over a meeting of veterans' organizations Friday night at which the formation of the Home Guard was discussed.

Two platoons of the Guard have been allocated to this city and district, totalling three officers and 80 other ranks. Of these, 54 men will be enlisted in this city, 22 having been allocated the Canadian Corps Association, 22 to the Canadian Legion, eight to the Imperial Veterans and four to the Army and Navy Vets.

These men are to report to the Prince of Wales Armory on Monday, with each organization naming a few substitutes in case the original men picked do not pass the medical examination.

FLYING VISIT

Col. Brown will visit Wainwright-Vegreville district on Tuesday to arrange for the enlistment of a section of 12 men and on Wednesday will fly to Grande Prairie to arrange for formation of a section there.

Two platoons will be headquartered here as well as company headquarters. Officers are still being picked.

It was announced that a quota has been established for each organization and no man will be accepted for enlistment unless recommended by one or other of these associations.

Two platoons of 38 men each will be enlisted from the Edmonton and Calgary areas.

Other quotas have been allocated as follows:

Lethbridge area, one section of 12 men; Medicine Hat area, platoon headquarters of one subaltern, two other ranks and two sections (24 men); Drumheller area, one section, 12 men; Blairmore area, one section 12 men; Peace River district, platoon headquarters, one officer, two other ranks and one section (12 men).

Major J. M. Taylor, M.C., Medicine Hat police chief has been named as officer commanding No. 13 Company, Veterans Home Guard, C.A.S.F., Capt. A. C. Ballantine, of Calgary, is second in command.

These appointments have been confirmed at Ottawa.

The guard is to be composed of 250 officers and men from each of the 13 military districts. Recruiting is being left to the discretion of the district officer commanding.

Veterans are being selected in the following priority: 1. Veterans who served in an actual theatre of war; 2. veterans who served only in the United Kingdom and 3. veterans who served only in Canada.

TAWATINAW MAN STRUCK BY CAR IN "BLACKOUT"

Victim of a temporary "blackout" due to a power failure, Robert Thomas Henry, Tawatinaw, suffered a fractured right leg and body bruises when struck by a car at the intersection of 101 street and 102A avenue at about 10:40 p.m. Friday. Street lights in the vicinity of the accident were off at the time. The driver did not see Henry but stopped after feeling a bump, he told police.

The injured man was rushed to the Royal Alexandra hospital, where he was reported Saturday to be in a fairly satisfactory condition.

The driver said he was driving south along 101 street at a slow rate in the darkness and had swerved out to avoid two cars that suddenly loomed up ahead of him. He struck Henry, who was crossing the street.

Two passengers in the car both stated they did not see the man who was struck until after the accident.

ALBERTA HOMES MAY BE OPENED FOR REFUGEES

Indications that hundreds of Alberta homes may be opened to British and French refugee children for the duration of the war, was found in a survey made in Edmonton.

Hon. T. A. Crerar, who has jurisdiction over immigration, has called a conference for Monday between provincial and federal officials to discuss administrative problems connected with the bringing of child refugees from Britain and France, it was announced.

Deeply interested in the problem is the Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire, the local representatives stated that the problems had been discussed here for some time and members had gone on record as favoring the scheme. The national convention of the I.O.D.E. in Saint John, N.B., this week is expected to issue a statement concerning the organization's stand.

Officials of the Catholic Women's league stated that the organization is "most interested" in assisting the many Roman Catholic refugee children in Britain and France.

Canadian Federation of University Women, Edmonton branch, has indicated its desire to help young university women from war-devastated countries.

President of the Better Health Camp council, Mrs. N. Kinsky, asserted members of the group would be willing to help.

Officials of several other city organizations stated that so far their clubs had not discussed the problems, but that they would co-operate in any way possible when the appeal comes.

I. O. D. E. FUND BUYS COMFORTS FOR ARMY MEN

Members of the Imperial Order of the Daughters of the Empire organization have organized a field comforts fund which will be the medium through which soldiers of the C. A. S. F. will receive cigarettes, tobacco and chocolate.

In the World War of 1914-1918 the I.O.D.E. performed many valuable services and now the good work is being continued.

The I.O.D.E. has made arrangements with Canadian transportation companies to carry these comforts without cost, while excise also has been waived.

This will leave a maximum of any contribution to be applied to purchase of the cigarettes, tobacco and chocolate.

Thus your money will go further if it is subscribed to the I.O.D.E. field comforts fund, as overhead costs are reduced to a minimum.

The Bulletin is happy to co-operate with the I.O.D.E. and will receive subscriptions to the fund and turn them over to the I.O.D.E., acknowledging same in these columns.

FEEDERS' DAY AT UNIVERSITY OPENS JUNE 8

Discussions On Cattle, Swine, Sheep Tests To Be Featured

The department of animal husbandry, University of Alberta, has completed arrangements for the annual Feeders' Day to be held this year on Saturday, June 8.

The program will include a discussion of the results of various feeding trials with beef cattle, swine and sheep, that have been completed during the past year and will provide an interesting and profitable day for all those engaged in the production of livestock under Alberta conditions.

MEET AT FARM

Farmers and others interested will meet at the university live stock farm, two miles south of the main university buildings, at 10:30 a.m. on Saturday, June 8.

In addition to the day's program, visitors will have the run of the farm and members of the staff will be on hand to answer all questions. Lunch may be secured at the farm buildings.

Fifty head of range steers, 150 swine and 50 range ewes have been on experiment during the past 12 months. The results of these feeding trials will be the basis for this year's discussions. These will include reports comparing grass and dry lot finishing of cattle. The influence of such factors as different amounts and kind of protein supplements, varying the grain allowance at different periods of growth together with the maximum and minimum marketing weights in relation to economy of gain and quality of carcass produced in the case of swine.

Commercial Fish Season Now Open At Pigeon Lake

Summer commercial fishing in Pigeon Lake is now open and will continue until Aug. 23 next, according to Hon. D. B. Mullen, minister of agriculture.

In this period, fishing will be permitted only from 9 a.m. Tuesday in each week until noon on Thursday following, when nets shall be lifted once only on each Wednesday and Thursday between 8 a.m. and noon.

During the fishing season any resident of the province shall be eligible for a fisherman's license, which will enable him or a member of his family to fish in waters designated in the license, provided that no household shall be eligible for more than one license.

In 1892, Clarence Childs of the Cleveland team won the baseball batting championship by only 11-10000ths of a percentage point.

18 Mechanics In R.C.A.F. Leave For East Centres

Largest group of applicants yet called for service with the R.C.A.F. from this city to date, 18 mechanics have left Edmonton for eastern training centres. The announcement was made by Flying Officer I. H. Christie, officer in charge of recruiting here.

The following were in the group: C. H. Hokanson, L. R. Bowles, T. A. McKinley, F. C. Carmichael, D. W. Louch, M. J. O'Dwyer, R. V. Wesley, P. Anderson, E. Kenouf, W. G. Matisek, and J. McMahon, all of Edmonton.

N. Manzatiuk, Mundare; P. A. Bugo, Camrose; C. J. Dobb, Bruderheim; M. J. Bernard, Henry Hill; D. C. Wilton, Leduc; N. G. Allen, Dewberry; A. H. Johnson, Clairmont.

World-Wide News Pictures By The Edmonton Bulletin Cameramen

Like greased lightning, Germany's military machine struck the Lowlands without a warning May 10. In six days it conquered Holland; in eight it overran most of Belgium; in 11 its vanguards were within 65 miles of Paris and 12 miles from the English Channel, across which William of Normandy journeyed to conquer England in 1066—the last time Britain was invaded.

This map shows the general direction of the many-forked attack. Note that the Germans broke into France through the Maginot line extension, most of which was built last September, when the French realized the Belgian defences were probably inadequate.

Clouds of bombers heralded the Nazi lightning. They smashed at Allied assembly points and lines of travel. Then tanks crashed through hastily assembled Allied forces and armored cars and infantry-carrying trucks drove through the holes.

Hard put to slow up the German drive in the north, the Allies had to worry also about a possible German drive in the south, through Switzerland, and about a possible Italian offensive in the same neighborhood.

At Funeral of Adjutant-General

Soldiers, civilians and statesmen took part in the funeral procession of Major-General H. H. Mathews, adjutant-general of the Canadian army who died in Ottawa. The funeral procession is shown here leaving All Saints church, Ottawa.

Daughter Is Cast

A familiar role will be enacted by Jean Rockne, 13-year-old daughter of the late Knute Rockne, when she appears in a screen play based on the life of her father. She's pictured arriving at South Bend, Ind., where he won fame at Notre Dame's football coach.

Leaves Canada To Fight For Native Belgium

Jacques de Bradant, 25, a Belgian army lieutenant, is pictured with his wife as he packed his grip at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel, New York city, where he stopped en route to service overseas. Head of a 7,000-acre estate in Quebec, he arrived by plane from Montreal. His wife will return to Canada.

British Arrest M.P.

CAPT. ARCHIBALD RAMSAY, Conservative member of the British House of Commons has been placed in prison as a result of Britain's drive against "fifth column" suspects. Capt. Ramsay served as an officer in the last war with the Coldstream Guards and was a member of the British Military Mission to Paris. Known for his strong Fascist leaning and his anti-Semitism, he was arrested by British authorities at the same time as British Fascist Leader Sir Oswald Mosely was arrested.

Finds New Land

Lean, wind-burned and grayer than when he sailed for Little America five months ago, Rear Admiral Richard Byrd leaves the White House after reporting on the U.S. Antarctic Expedition. He brought a map of a 900-mile, hitherto unknown, Antarctic coastline which he discovered and charted for the Navy.

CITY Trail Rangers gave an impressive display of their work at Knox United church Friday evening as groups from all sections of the city gathered for a Grand Camp, sponsored by the Trail Ranger Council. The camp lasted from 5 p.m. until after 10 p.m. The gathering opened with a grand Rowl and was followed by a banquet presided over by Bob Weyman of Wesley Tigers, mayor of the Edmonton Trail Ranger Council. Games, sing songs, and a display of work carried on by the boys was shown.

One of Edmonton's best known and finest Boy Scouts, Leonard S. Esnouf of 9628 110A avenue, has joined the Royal Canadian Air Force and has gone east for training. Leonard was judged one of the two best Scouts in the entire city in 1933 and was awarded a trip "down north" by the Hudson's Bay Company. Leonard's enlistment in the R.C.A.F. adds to the long list of Scouts and Scout leaders in Edmonton who have already joined Canada's armed forces.

CONCLUDING one of the most successful season in the history of the Interdenominational Young People's Board, a gala dance will be held in the Y.M.C.A. building, Saturday, June 8, starting at 9 p.m. Both gymnasiums at the "Y" have been "booked" for the occasion and two orchestras will be in attendance. The executive of the board is putting forward every effort to make the dance the most outstanding social event sponsored by the organization this year. One of the highlights of the dance will be a "fashion show" during the intermission period.

Edmonton members of the Hi-Y organization covered themselves with glory last week-end when an Alberta conference of the movement was held in the Y.M.C.A. building here. More than 40 delegates were present from Calgary and Lethbridge for the gathering, the most successful conference staged by the Hi-Y clubs. More than 60 Edmonton members of the society assisted at the sessions. Calgary and Lethbridge members were high in their praise for the hospitality shown them by the Edmonton boys. And as for the members of the Edmonton Girls' Hi-Y clubs who supplied partners for the visiting delegates at social functions!—all we need mention is that there has been a noticeable, a very noticeable—increase in the size and number of mailbags arriving from the south during the past week.

EDMONTON Scouts have been called to the lead of Scout troops at Moncton, N.B., by raising the necessary funds for the filling of Red Cross hospital bags. The troop patrol of eight boys is asked to supply the necessary toilet articles, including toothbrush and paste, comb, small shaving kit, facecloth, writing paper and pencil. The Wolf Cub Pack are supplying small needle and thread repair kits. The bags will be forwarded to hospitals in France and England and no doubt will be occupied by men brought in from forward casualty clearing stations.

CITY RANGERS CHECK CAMPSITE DOMINION RALLY

Getting ready for the Dominion Guide Camp at Red Deer, four 10th Edmonton Rangers, Esther Anderson, June Ford, Dorothy McDonald, Jean Paul and their captain, Miss Betty Martin, drove out to the Guide's campsite at White Sands, Cooking Lake, to check over the equipment. They left the city early on Empire Day for their week-end camp. A more enjoyable time would have been had by all if there had been none of those insufficient, wicked creatures known as mosquitoes.

Through the League of Nations Society in Canada the Canadian Council has learned of a number of young girls of guide age who have come with their families from the Sudeten area in Czecho-Slovakia as refugees to Canada and are now living in settlements in Alberta and Saskatchewan.

Assisting these girls, it is suggested by the council, is a national good turn which will surely appeal to every guide and to the girls' generosity as well as to the ingenuity of a very good ranger. The children are learning to speak English and would find books simply written and illustrated of great assistance. Guides and brownies who have discarded games and outgrown toys as well to give are invited to ask their leaders to communicate with the National Service committee at Dominion headquarters.

Garneau guides had their annual inspection recently. As a special project at their meeting each patrol decided on what they considered an ideal camp site. Camp sites were judged, highest mark going to the patrol of which Pat Hawes is leader.

Mrs. E. W. S. Kane, district commissioner for the company, inspected the guides and presented Winnifred Hunter with her second class badge.

A. D. YOUMANS TAKES POST IN "Y" WAR WORK

A. D. "Fred" Youmans, physical director of the Edmonton Y.M.C.A. since 1924, has resigned to accept an appointment by the Y.M.C.A. war services committee to the Royal Canadian Air Force. It was announced today by Oliver C. McIntyre, president of the Y.M.C.A. Mr. Youmans will leave early in June for Toronto from which point he will receive his special appointment.

Since 1924 Mr. Youmans has been a member of the "Y" staff and has been noted for his professional skill, kindly manner and keen interest in boys and men. He has been actively related not only to the general direction of physical activities in the Y.M.C.A. but also to young men's clubs and groups. Since 1929 he has been one of the leading sponsors of softball each season, as secretary and president of the Pastime league. In basketball circles he has been active as district organizer for northern Alberta.

Member of the Kiwanis club and of the Kiwanis Glee club, he also touches active part in community life. He was also a member and officer at Central United church. Prior to coming to Edmonton, Mr. Youmans served at Montreal Westmount branch and at Brandon, Manitoba.

Directors of the "Y" and members will hold an "adieu dinner" at the Royal George hotel dining room on Tuesday, June 4, at 6.30 p.m., in honor of Mr. Youmans.

C.G.I.T. Notes

By ETHEL BRIGGS

All Canadian Girls in Training are urged to attend the service at First Presbyterian church, which has been arranged by the Ministerial Association. Rev. McElroy Thompson will be the speaker and Dr. Tuttle will conduct the graduation ceremony.

Metropolitan: A 25th anniversary tea was held by the C.G.I.T. on Wednesday, Mrs. Thompson, Mrs. Johnston and Muriel Inkpen received. Those pouring tea were: Mrs. Fry, Mrs. McElroy, Mrs. E. A. McBain, Mrs. A. Inkpen, Mrs. R. J. Foster and Mrs. W. M. Seller. Miss Dorothy McBain, who has just returned from Korea, was present.

First Presbyterian: The girls concluded their activities with a social evening.

Westmount: The senior group is holding a supper meeting down by the river.

Erskine: The Wide-a-Wakes and Shipmates played baseball. The group led by Mary Livingston went roller skating.

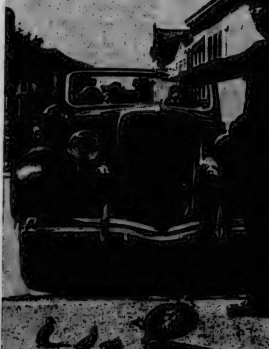

McDougall: The Wohela group held a hike on Thursday.

Highlands: The Merry Workers held a theatre party and dinner on Friday, May 31, and are planning a hike for June 8. The Jolly Jokers went on a hike to Capilal Hill.

First Baptist: The girls are planning to entertain McDougall C.G. I.T. at a hike on June 7.

Wesley's annual Mother and Daughter banquet was held on May 22. Greetings were brought from Girls' Council by Anna Meilson, from the Girls' Work Board by Mrs. Keicher, and from the Boys' Department by Bill Boon. Mrs. Keicher officiated at the cutting of the birthday cake. Each girl presented carnations to their mothers and leaders. The evening closed with a candle-lighting ceremony led by Miss May Sutcliffe, superintendent.

Norwood: On Tuesday evening the Norwood C.G.I.T. held their 28th Mother and Daughter banquet. A birthday cake, decorated with 25 candles was donated by Mrs. Lamberson. A toast to the mothers was proposed by Evelyn Foley and responded to by Mrs. Lamberson. Anna Neilson brought greetings from council, Mr. Elliott brought greetings from the Sunday school, Rev. S. H. Irving brought greetings from the church.

Ducking the Traffic

Not the least prominent of the citizens of Newton, is "Fanny," Sussex county's tame duck. Fanny is shown above leading her children of spring 1940 for a stroll across main street in Newton, while an obliging policeman holds up traffic for her. The guardian of the law seems to be enjoying Fanny's journey almost as much as the ducks.

Frozen Action At The Swimming Pool

A news photographer caught these youngsters just before they hit the water at a swimming pool during the recent hot spell. There's nothing elegant about their form, but by the end of the summer they will have improved much. They'll probably be ashamed they were ever caught in action like that above. Good form, or bad, there's nothing like a swim in the good old summer time.

Edmonton High School Students Are Bulletin Correspondents

McDOUGALL COMMERCIAL

By Dorothy Currey

Exams have been placed at the top of the list this past week and "Please do not disturb" signs could be seen hanging on many of the doors. Lists of the final exams have been posted and now the only thing left for us to do is study.

Due to unavoidable circumstances the graduation banquet and dance has been cancelled.

Academic winners this year are: Group 1—Edith Ritson, Jennie Pawlyshyn, Edith Small, Lois Plumley, Dorothy Chandler, Edith Head, Lois McIntosh. Group 3—Margaret Eske, Kurt Jaake, Group 4—Vasy Evans, Keith Healey, Lois Knight, Norma Gregory, Marjorie Smith. Group 6—Stephanie Lawruska, Joyce Finlay, Grace Lyrne, Celia Fiet, Sylvia Michalnz, Ernest Majirs, Grace Tapley, Helen Marks, Margaret Sutherland, Dorothy Boiander.

The whole school wishes these people the best in the coming year. The Chronicle will be out next week.

VICTORIA

By Ib Nonnecke

There are very few around the school who know anything about the "Fashion Lit," so here are a few facts. It is under the supervision of Miss Cameron, one of the senior class teachers, assisted by Muriel Campbell and Marion Ingram. The casts are to wear beautiful clothes—the main item. The play was written by Herbert Ingram. The Boys' Shop is donating clothes for the boys. Very appreciative aid came from Miss McCallum of Singer Sewing Machine Co., and Miss Clarny of the Hudson's Bay.

The I.O.D.E. awards special cash prizes to those students, a boy and a girl, who make best marks in Social Studies 1 and English 2. In the first group the winners were Hymie Rubin and Frances Lafler; the second group, Mary Johnson and Gus Barootes.

The house league softball is progressing nicely. In the girls' lineup, Boer and Barilko are tied with four games each and in the boys, the Cubs are leading with eight games and the Sod Busters have five games.

SOUTH SIDE COMPOSITE

By Kay Banham

Comes summer! And with summer comes gay colors, budding romance and a desire to get out of doors. Students no longer hurry to school to escape the biting winter wind. Instead, they saunter slowly along the way, wishing desperately that they could think of some way to escape the ordeal of education. But the teachers are wise. They know our secret longings and note our glances with suspicion.

But soon now will come the day of liberation. To the tens and eleivens this means merely coasting til the end of the season: but the twelves still have a steep climb before reaching the desired goal.

TECHNICAL

By Pat McMillan

All week long the graduation class was feverish with excitement in anticipation of the graduation banquet and dance which was held last night in the main gymnasium of the Corona hotel. Mr. and Mrs. McKee and Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Otteswell were guests, together with the students' parents.

The highlight of the evening was the medley produced on Tech activities by Mr. Robinson. There were "oohs" and "awhs" as the students watched themselves and other students perform on the screen. The teachers "booed" and "hissed" one another, much to the delight of the students.

Jean Cowley, Avis Eaton, Willard Worthington, Roy Dick, Armin Kutzner and Ronald Biggs were presented with academic pins by Mrs. Otteswell. The evening concluded with dancing.

WESTMOUNT

By Bert Nightingale

Let's see, now, just what we have in the old bag of tricks in the way of news. Hm, oh yes, here's a little item about Don Arnett, ex-president of the Students' Union (1938-39). Don's been going around with a very pleased look on his pan this week. Says by the look of the war news, his candidature in the R.C.A.F. is liable to develop into something more definite. He's pretty keen on getting in with the boys in the line and we wish him the best of luck.

A large number of W.H.S. boys participated in the Hi-Y conference last week-end. Smaller of fact seven were initiated Saturday and are expected to form the nucleus of next term's organization. Thirteen visiting delegates were billeted in "Westmount" homes.

Betty Montgomery was recently named valedictorian to the class of '40. Her composition, together with a very life-like piece of portraiture will appear in the Year Book.

EASTWOOD

By Wilma Van Deelen

Preview to the holiday week-end the Eastwood Players will present on May 23. Included in the entertainment was an original play written by Tom McCulloch and Bob Jackson, and a mock baby show, which featured ambitious mothers and unappreciative infants. Taking part in the play were Caroline King, George Manson, Pat Brownlee, Donna Seaman, Nancy Gibb and Stuart Baker.

The musical program consisted of numbers by Barbara MacQuarrie, Pat Brownlee, Martha McAndrew, Caroline King, Jim Millar. Another highlight of the program was the presentation of academic pins to leaders. This was done by Jean Booker, secretary of the Students' Union, assisted by E. B. Ryan.

Commemorating Victoria Day, a colorful address was given by the principal, E. B. Ryan.

Following the Lit, a dance was held in the gym, with music supplied by Tom McCulloch and his orchestra. The orchestra, which was organized at the beginning of the year, has been doing splendid work inside the school and is now expanding to the public. Congratulations and the best of luck to all its members from grateful E.H.S. students.

DAY OF WORSHIP IS HELD HERE BY ANGLICAN YOUTH

On the 24th of May, 75 A.Y.P.A. members enjoyed a day of worship, work, fellowship and edification at the Anglican church camp-site at Kapasiwin. Rev. Cuttell, of Wabamun, opened the day's activities with a short open air service. One of the most impressing moments of the day was the period of loyal attention the members gave while listening to our King's message to the Empire. Work was the outstanding note in the early afternoon—everywhere around the camp could be seen: broom bridgades, rakes, axes, hammers, saws and even scrubbing brushes all with an A.Y. member on one end of them. Swimming and softball followed with George Alexander's team beating Stan Bryant's team because of all of George's home runs. The campfire was built by the Wabamun Scouts and conducted by Scouter Cuttell aided by the Wabamun A.Y. This excursion was sponsored by the Edmonton council and hit a new high in A.Y. activities.

Greetings were sent from the Edmonton Council to the Athabasca Diocesan A.Y.P.A. conference held May 25th and 26th at Grande Prairie.

HOLY TRINITY

Recently Holy Trinity A.Y.P.A. held a successful hike. A baseball game was held at the last meeting followed by an interesting discussion on items of interest appearing in the summary of the leadership training course.

ST. MARY'S

A party planned to entertain a number of soldiers stationed at Edmonton was not held due to circumstances. At the last meeting of this club, the members worked on the church grounds and many a blister was to be seen before the evening was over.

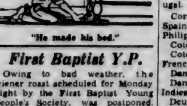

PRO-CATHEDRAL

At a recent meeting of All Saints' A.Y.P.A. the high-lights of the year's meetings were discussed with a view of continuing their success in the future. On Monday evening a closing social was held in the Parish Hall at which St. Faith's and St. Mary's A.Y.P.A.'s were guests. Rev. L. D. Batchelor and Rev. Canon Trendall were thanked for their whole-hearted support in the club's activities.

CHRIST CHURCH

Christ church A.Y.P.A. held their closing banquet in the Parish Hall recently. The guests included: Arch-deacon and Mrs. Tackaberry, Rev. and Mrs. L. D. Batchelor, Rev. P. Putney, Mr. Gordon Pretty, president of the International Young People's Board. A sing-song and dance followed the banquet.

"He made his bed"

First Baptist Y.P.

Owing to bad weather, the wiener roast scheduled for Monday night by the First Baptist Young People's Society, was postponed. The young people spent the evening in the church parlors, playing games and ending the gathering with a sing song and refreshments. A hike has been planned for Monday, June 3, providing the weather clears. All wishing to attend are to meet at 124 street and 109 avenue at 8 p.m.

Fifteen City Scout Troops Participate In Annual Rally: Country Points Represented

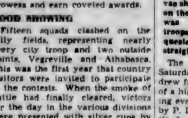

The local Boy Scout organization conducted its annual May 24th rally with the hearty approval of the weatherman this year as balmy breezes and sun filled skies welcomed contestants for the out-door laurels of campcraft, signalling and bridge building. Nearly 250 persons attended the rally held annually to give well trained Scout teams an opportunity to demonstrate their prowess and earn coveted awards.

GOOD SHOWING

Fifteen patrols clashed on the rally fields, representing nearly every city troop and two outside points, Vegreville and Athabasca. This was the first year that country visitors were invited to participate in the contests. When the smoke of battle had finally cleared, victors for the day in the various divisions were presented with silver cups by judges and Scouting officials.

In the signalling bracket the neatly precisioned flag-waving of the 6th and Strong reaped the champion title in the senior and junior classes. Bridge builders extraordinary were the 10th troopers who lashed their way across a water-filled gulley. Best combinations of splints and stretchers were the 8th and 2nd, while around a roaring campfire the 10th campsiters put all others to shame with their vocal efforts to garner the campfire singsong award. Keenly contested was the camping competition with a record number of entrants raising canvas shelters for an overnight's stay on the grounds. The camping cup was won by the 10th and 6th troops who made similar conquests last year, making it two straight.

The rally was officially closed Saturday when the campers withdrew from what had been the scene of a highly successful district Scouting event. The contests were judged by P. D. Fowler, L. Pilcher, B. Cole, L. Allbright, H. S. Clark, Dick Weir and Mrs. Foster. Scoutmasters of the various victorious troops included Mrs. McCullough of the 10th, Fred Greenwood of the 6th, Charlie Lashbrook of the 2nd, and Jack Humphries of the 8th.

NEWSY NATURE NOTES

BY STUART L THOMPSON

THE TRILLIUMS

This is Trillium time. Throughout the whole country, wherever there are woods or wooded hillsides, we find these lovely flowers in their glory. The level ground in the hillslope with the thousands of pointed white petals in sight everywhere gives one the impression of a star-spangled sky.

The Trillium is one of our flowers which is very aptly named. When we examine the root—I beg your pardon, the root of the word I mean, not the plant—we find that "Tri" meaning "three," is apparent in every part of the Trillium plant. The three white petals, three green sepals underneath, six stamens in two sets of three, three pistils, and three large leaves. Everything in three's, you see. Just as we might say, "One never knows, does one?" so I suppose, if the Trillium were speaking, the plant would say, "Three never knows, does three?"

There are several species of Trilliums. The largest, most common and best known is the White Trillium. In full bloom this beautiful flower can be picked in the forest while to five and six inches across. No wonder the hillsides are white where they grow. Large as it is, should you go to the same hillside a few days later you may find the flowers flushed into a delicate pink or even a deep wine-red. The Trillium, so pure and white, blushes with age.

Next in size is a smaller white species, the Nodding Trillium, which, instead of holding its head high in full view like its relative, pedalled flower modestly turned downward and hidden beneath its three leaves. And the most beautiful of the family is the Painted Trillium, whose white petals are daintily streaked with lines of purple. The strange exception in Trilliums is the Red Trillium, or, as John Burroughs called it, the "Wake-robin," with its flower of deep liver-red petals.

The Trilliums, although beautiful, can not be called fragrant. There is a beauty of size, of grace, and of purity of color, not of perfume. And yet like many other family, there is a skeleton. The odd one of the family, the Red Trillium, has instead of the delicate scent one might expect of flowers a dense heavy odor which reminds one of meat which is not quite fresh, to say the least.

The Trilliums belong to the Lily family, and share with these popular flowers many characteristics of the family. Yet they differ in one point. Trilliums all have net-veined leaves. This may not seem strange for in many, many plants the leaves are net-veined. But, among the Lilies, the Trillium is in regard is one of those curious exceptions to the rule; one of Nature's surprises in her otherwise orderly world. Next time you are among Trilliums, notice the intricate systems of veins that criss-cross the leaves and compare it with the straight, parallel veining of the Bellwort, Clintonia, or Soloman's Seal, or other flowers of the Lily family growing nearby.

Normal Notes

By DAGMAR EDWARDSON

Examinations are over, the term is almost completed and Normal students are enjoying one last week together in many forms of activity.

Highlights of last week was the Empire Day program. In this splendid entertainment, assistance was received from outstanding guest artists and pupils of the Normal Practice school.

Also in addition to addresses by provincial, federal, university and sheep association officials, there will be interesting discussions on such important matters as the Cobalt investigation regarding minerals for sheep. Visual discussion will be led by Prof. J. P. Sackville, U. of A.

John Wilson, Jr., Innisfail, will give a demonstration of power shearing and Art Spurrell, of the U. of A., will demonstrate handshearing of sheep.

Other matters dealing in sheep will be discussed by Dr. P. R. Talbot, provincial veterinarian, and Mr. Fred Grisdale, official of the Canadian Co-operative Wool Growers Ltd., will speak on the activities and history of the co-operative.

A practical butcher will give a demonstration of cutting up a lamb carcass.

Judging competitions of pens of ewes and market lambs will also be held.

Forestry Camp

A grant of $75 was made by the Norfolk County Council toward the incidental expenses of the Boy Scouts Association in establishing the new Norfolk County Forestry Camp for Boy Scouts of southwestern Ontario. The camp was held at the Forestry Station, St. Williams, May 16-17.

BENNETT NOTES

By Patricia Feather

On Wednesday night Cloverdale community witnessed some very exciting boxing and wrestling exhibitions at Bennett school.

The girls of Grades 5, 6, 7 and 8 played two friendly games of baseball with Donald Ross school and were beaten by very close scores.

AROUND THE WORLD in News Science Aviation Exploration

The cat's famed "sixth sense" stood a feline in Turkey in good stead recently. Seized by an eagle, carried aloft to an estimated 1,000 feet, then dropped, the cat hit the ground, got up, and walked away! Studies by doctors have shown that a cat's sense of balance is determined by its inner ear. The animals, which turn over as soon as dropped and glide down with feet spread and back humped, performed just as well blindfolded. But when their inner ear was operated on, they rolled over and over, and struck the floor in any position!

An oil pipeline, 283 miles long, and capable of delivering 25,000 barrels a day, has just been completed in Colombia. That country now has two lines, but it has a long way to go to catch the U.S. As far back as 1924, America had 63,000 miles of the tubes. The first one was started 75 years ago, but the "prime" Rockefeller had the idea before that. Tired of carrying oil in earthenware vessels, they tried a bamboo line. But more petroleum leaked out than passed safely through, and the line was abandoned.

Looking Them Over

Deadly Sniper

Week's Roundup

THE majority of the fans who sat in on last night's boxing card at the Memorial Hall seemed pretty well convinced that Jimmy Chapman has a good chance to fight his way up the ladder in featherweight ranks—if he can keep on fighting.

Whether or not Chapman will get a chance to do any more fighting here in the near future will depend on how the balance sheet shapes up today for Promoter Mike Cutcher on last night's show.

The card was good all the way through—more good honest action than is being offered in many fight clubs in the biggest cities on this continent. So was the first card Cutcher presented some time ago.

But last night's attendance was far from encouraging. Cutcher is not looking for big profits. He'd be tickled to death if he could make the game here pay him his living costs. However, no promoter can keep on staging cards when the receipts fall below the costs.

It looks as if boxing may have to be shelved here—at least until the present critical stage of the war has passed. Enlistments are already reducing the number of fighters available in these parts—and heaven knows there never were any too many.

Chapman has a lot of what it takes to get along Leather Lane. He's young yet and should develop, but he must keep fighting to do it.

Edmonton Youth Top Marksman

JAMES GRIEVE, 15-year-old member of the Greater Edmonton Rifle Association, is one citizen that no Nazi invader or parachutist will care to meet. Grieve has just been awarded the Dominion Marksmen expert shield with a score of 5915 out of a possible 6000 according to word received today from the Montreal headquarters of Dominion Marksmen.

Only a small number of expert rifle shooters in Canada have ever accomplished the feat of scoring the required number of points to attain this honor, which is held by less than 200 out of the 30,000 registered members of the nation-wide shooting organization.

It requires outstanding marksmanship to post a score better than the necessary minimum of 5660 points of the possible 6000 in this competition in which each marksman must shoot 30 targets from each of the standing, sitting and prone positions. To gain the shield, the rifleman must shoot twenty possibles, that is a perfect score, in the prone position, twenty 98's or better in the kneeling or sitting position, and twenty 95's or better in the standing off-hand stance.

Rounding Up the Stray Shorts

DR. G. E. BENNETT of Johns Hopkins Hospital recommends that Dizzy Dean switch to a complete side-arm delivery. Dr. Bennett found no injury that would hamper such a motion with more of a body pivot than Ol' Diz has been using as a Chicago Cub. Dr. Bennett also reports that pieces of chipped bone may have to be removed from Clay Bryant's elbow to restore that big Bruin's effectiveness.

Ball players say Sid Hudson, the Washington recruit, is another who would fare better if he changed to a side-arm delivery. . . . His over-hand fast ball is as straight as a string.

PONOKA BACK HERE SUNDAY; MEET ARROWS

Ponoka Stampeders, the classy club that scored a 6-0 triumph against Dodgers here last Thursday and played errorless ball to do it, are back at Renfrew Park Sunday afternoon. The Stampeders will meet Laurel Harney's Arrows with the game scheduled to start at 3 p.m.

Arrows, like Ponoka, will be battling for the higher brackets. Ponoka can top the league with a win here Sunday while Arrows can jump to within a tie of the leaders should they come through.

Bud Foley, the "workhorse" of the Arrow pitching staff will be ready for Sunday's game. Foley has twirled good ball for the Arrows and is a likely winner Sunday.

FISTIC JOUSTS THRILL CROWD BENNETT SCHOOL

Bennett school pupils provided thrilling ring battles in the school hall recently with 26 pupils mixing punches and wrestling holds during the evening.

George Shanks, professional heavyweight, boxed four, two-minute rounds with Jack Berry, while Mike Percheson and Barney O'Connor gave a fine exhibition of professional wrestling. They went to a 20-minute draw.

Officials were: Referee, Carl Kirkwood; medical examiner, Dr. Cranz; judges, Frank Heller and Mr. Marshall. The wrestling referee was Leo Magirl. Timekeepers were Chief Shute and Sidney Bowcott with G. F. Hustler, principal, promoting the card. Promoter Mike Cutcher provided the ring and equipment.

Following were the complete results:

BOXING RESULTS

Stanley Mellee (winner) vs. Sidney Anderson (50 lb. class).

Kenneth Christensen (winner) vs. Delbert Lyndgard (60 lb. class).

David West (winner) vs. Lloyd Broadbent (100 lb. class).

Angus Hunger vs. Johnny Bowcott (draw) (60 lb. class).

Eric Woolridge (winner) vs. Billie Cook (90 lb. class).

WRESTLING RESULTS

Raymond Christianson (winner) vs. Eugene LaChance (70 lb. class).

Jack Woolridge (winner) vs. Jimmie McGregor (75 lb. class).

Silas Campbell (winner) vs. Arthur Speers (70 lb. class).

Elmer Cumford (winner) vs. Leonard Smalley (90 lb. class).

Danny Mellee (winner) vs. Billy Bryno (60 lb. class).

Bobby Mills (winner) vs. Jackie Lyndgard (60 lb. class).

Robert Meyers (winner) vs. Pete Hunt (130 lb. class).

Gordon Timbres (winner) vs. John Morsel (130 lb. class).

Santos Hugo Victim Of Deadly Left Hand

Edmonton Bulletin Sports Editor

JIMMY CHAPMAN'S left hand, about the most subtle and vicious that has been seen around Edmonton battle pits, carried him to a technical knockout victory last night over Santos Hugo of Los Angeles in the ninth round of Promoter Mike Cutcher's boxing card at the Memorial Hall.

Hugo, plump little seal from the Philippines, bounced and bounded around the ring like a rubber ball as Chapman blasted away at him round after round. Offensively Hugo didn't have much, but he certainly could take it. Chapman cut his opponent's face, lips and nose with rapier lefts and occasional shifts that brought his right crashing in, but he just couldn't put the little brown man down for a count. Referee Jerry Delane stopped it in the ninth to save Hugo from further punishment.

The first Filipino to fight here, Santos Hugo made a fine showing for his race. He was as game as they make them, he could take it without flinching and he never quit trying. Chapman had a big advantage over him in height and reach, although Hugo weighed 130 to Jimmy's 120. Against a man his own height. The Filipino would have been far more effective.

TAKES PUNISHMENT

After the first couple rounds, which were fairly even, there was never any doubt but that Chapman would win on points. He took some heavy punishment though, as Hugo exploded from time to time. Jimmy's nose was under repair soon after the battle started and had to be treated by Trainer Pat O'Hunter at the end of each round.

While all the bouts were fast and bitter, the card failed to draw a full house. Promoter Mike Cutcher will be lucky if he can pay off all costs with what came in through the box office.

Benny Geary, the able light and welterweight champion of Saskatchewan, won an unanimous decision over Vic Pollock of Edmonton in the six-round semi-final. Benny awarmed in repeatedly on Pollock with vicious and effective attacks that gave him a big margin of points. Pollock failed to make any noticeable use of his right hand.

Mickey McGuire returned to Edmonton ring wars last night to tangle with Dave Winquist of Barrhead in a torrid six-rounder. Mickey's greater experience and polish earned him the decision. Winquist took a heavy blasting during the first two rounds and seemed likely to go down for the count at any moment. After that he rallied gamely, however, to give McGuire a mighty tough battle for the remaining rounds.

Flash Bailey won a decision over Popeye Harding in a four-round prelim, a lightning pace from start to finish and more than a few good laughs. Jimmy Rimmer was scheduled to meet Bailey in this event, but he is endeavoring to enlist and is about to undergo an operation which may get him past the medical board. His doctor refused to let him fight last night.

GUILD BEATS LEO JANITEN CALGARY BOUT

CALGARY, June 1. — Eddie Marcus, Los Angeles lightweight, took but two minutes of the first round to score a technical knockout over Gordon Thomson of Black Diamond, western Canada lightweight champion, in the main bout of a boxing card here last night. Thomson's title was not at stake.

Thomson was knocked down three times by rights to the jaw and while he got up without a count in each case, he was so dazed Referee "Kid" Lucas stopped the fight. Thomson weighed 134½ and Marcus 135.

In the preliminaries Lindsay Guild of Strome, Alta., at 135, outpointed Leo Janiten of Edmonton, 165; Johnny Loftus of Lestock, Sask., 138, outpointed A. Ford, of Vancouver, 136, and Phil Palmer of Vancouver, 127, and Buddy Loftus of Lestock, 127½, fought to a draw.

Large Field Is Ready For Prairie Race Season

By CHARLES EDWARDS

WINNIPEG, June 1.—The 68-day prairie racing season opens here today with nearly 500 thoroughbreds stabled for the Whittier Park meet. R. James Speers, general manager of Whittier Park and Honorary secretary of the Prairie Thoroughbred Breeders and Racing Association, said prospects are excellent for a successful season.

"We have 200 horses here from United States tracks and the calibre of our Canadian-bred horses has continued to improve," Mr. Speers said. He referred to the fact that in 1939 horses foaled in Canada won the record sum of $200,240 or 46.8 per cent of the total purse money distributed by Canadian racing associations. In 1930 Canadian-bred horses won only 19.4 per cent of Canadian purses.

THE SCHEDULE

The Whittier meet continues until June 17, after which the thoroughbreds move to Winnipeg's other track, Polo Park, for the June 19-July 4 meeting. The other 40 days of the prairie season will be spent at Calgary, Edmonton, Saskatoon and Regina tracks.

A total of $110,000 in purses will be distributed during the 28-day Winnipeg season. Feature events of the Whittier meet are the Jeffrey Stakes, June 5, over a mile and 70 yards for a purse of $1,000 added, the Whittier Park Handicap, June 8, over the same distance and for a similar purse, and the $1,500 added Speers Handicap, June 15, over one and one-sixteenth miles.

Feature of today's seven-race card is the Provident Handicap over a mile and 70 yards with Alf Tarn's Reccaina given top weight of 113 pounds in the 10-horse field. Reccaina is fresh from Tanforan track in California where it won three and was third twice in its last five starts.

NEW STARTING GATES

An electrically-operated starting gate designed by Speers makes its initial appearance on any track with the Whittier opening. Last season Speers successfully introduced the Cowell gate to western tracks. The Speers gate has "V" shaped front panels in the starting stalls to force the horses to stand in the middle. A new rear panel prevents horses from backing out of the stalls but can be opened instantly in the event of trouble.

"We have schooled more than 500 horses out of the new gate and there has never been a hitch of any kind," Speers said. "Owners, trainers and jockeys all are highly pleased with its performance."

The "eye in the sky" camera will be used again at the finish line. The daily double tickets will be sold at pari-mutuel wickets on the first and third races and the quinella or one-two bet on the last race daily.

George W. Schilling of San Francisco is presiding steward of the Winnipeg meet. For the 16th year Jim Donovan is official starter.

BRANTFORD, Ont., June 1. — Ernest Rush, Lethbridge, Alta., blind athlete, won the boys' senior cup at the annual track and field meet at the Ontario school for the blind here.

In the junior title hunt in this most unique athletic meet in Canada, John Panteluk, Bienfait, Sask., was out on top.

Events included running, jumping, rope climbing, ball throwing, and, in the novelty class, sack race, shoe race and three-legged race.

INTER-CLUB TENNIS OPENS HERE TUESDAY

Nine clubs will take part in inter-club tennis which starts on Tuesday June 4, and will continue every week until July 30. The matches are made up of seven events, namely: Men's singles, ladies' doubles, mixed doubles, junior men's singles, ladies' singles, men's doubles and junior ladies' singles. The first four matches to be played on the courts of the home team (team last named in the schedule), the others at the visiting club.

The captain of the home team is responsible for arranging the match and phoning in the results to Don Collier at 32804.

The following players are ineligible to play in inter-club competition: Snorre Purcell, Harry Kinloch, Jack Oliver, Walter McIntosh, Roger Waiers, Bill Stark and Jimmy Hoyle, in addition the four semi-finalists in the ladies' open singles cannot participate.

The following is the schedule for 1940:

June 4—Jasper Place vs. Scona Centre; McCauley vs. Garneau; Glenora vs. Varsity; Eastwood vs. C.N.R.; Fort Saskatchewan, bye.

June 11—Fort Sask. vs. Scona Centre; Varsity vs. McCauley; C. N. R. vs. Glenora; Eastwood vs. Garneau; Jasper Place bye.

June 18—Fort Sask. vs. Varsity; Jasper Place vs. C.N.R.; Garneau vs. Glenora; Eastwood vs. Scona Centre; McCauley bye.

June 25—Fort Sask. vs McCauley; Eastwood vs. Jasper Place; Scona Centre vs. Glenora; C.N.R. vs. Varsity; Glenora bye.

July 2—Fort Sask. vs. Glenora; Jasper Place vs. McCauley; C.N.R. vs. Garneau; Scona Centre vs. Varsity; Eastwood bye.

July 9—Fort Sask. vs. Jasper Place; Eastwood vs McCauley; C. N. R. vs Scona Centre; Garneau vs. Varsity; Glenora bye.

July 16—Fort Sask. vs. Garneau; Jasper Place vs Glenora; C.N.R. vs McCauley; Eastwood vs. Varsity; Scona Centre bye.

July 23—Fort Sask. vs. Eastwood; Jasper Place vs. Varsity; McCauley vs. Glenora; Garneau vs Scona Centre; C.N.R. bye.

July 30—Fort Sask. vs. C.N.R.; Jasper Place vs Garneau; Scona Centre vs. McCauley; Eastwood vs. Glenora; Varsity bye.

SCONA PLAYS CALLIE SQUAD ON SATURDAY

Unsuccessful in two starts in the Vets-Martin competition, the Scona United eleven makes its first start in league competition along with Callies on Saturday evening at the Clarke Stadium. The game will start at 7 p.m. It is the first game of the senior soccer schedule.

Scona deserved better fate in their Vets-Martin games. The eleven has drilled steadily and is now ready to meet the Scottish stars who emerged beaten but once in trophy play.

This will be the first time in a month of league rivalry and the best brand of soccer is expected as all games are important to the teams.

Following is the lineups for Saturday:

Scona: R. Carter, R. Shaw, L. Smitten, F. Gardiner, C. Pickles, J. Thompson, T. Scott, P. James, E. Scott, C. Francis, J. Lowe.

Callies: G. McGlynn, R. Reynolds, R. Barson, D. Whiteley, S. Olander, J. Sutherland, D. McAra, T. Harrison, W. Smart, D. Campbell, G. Kerr, A. Anderson, W. Gardner.

Referee: C. Souch.

BACKSPIN

How many times have you heard the gallery say "ah" and "oh" when watching a star professional put backspin on a particular shot? There is a definite secret for anyone could do it with a little practice. For instance, take a well-lofted iron, place the ball off your right foot and then hit it firmly on the down swing. Sure, you will take a divot, you should, but whenever you do don't scoop hit down. Try to hit that ball right down to Chana and the loft of the club will take it up and away with that so desirable backspin.

GRADS OPEN THEIR FINAL SERIES HE

Patrick Hunch Produces Starry Mickey MacKay

MONTREAL, June 1.—Mickey MacKay, "perhaps the greatest centre we ever had on the coast," joined Vancouver Millionaires in 1914 because of "a sixth sense hunch," Frank Patrick said Friday.

Patrick, now general manager of Montreal Canadiens, told how the "wee Scot," killed Thursday night in an automobile accident near Nelson, B.C., joined the team he and his brother, Lester, ran in the Pacific Coast League.

LEAVES AMATEURS

MacKay, who lived at Chesley, Ont., had been playing hockey at Grand Forks, B.C., before 1914 and believing there were better things in store for him, wrote Frank Patrick and told him he wanted to become a professional.

Patrick frequently received letters like that so wrote back suggesting MacKay try to hook on with Toronto or some club nearer his home. He suggested he get in touch with Jimmy Murphy who was handling Toronto.

"I don't know what made me change my mind," said Patrick, "but I sent a following letter with transportation and told him to report to Vancouver. It was one of those sixth sense hunches.

"MacKay wasn't practising five minutes before he attracted the attention of all watching him. He was different in more ways than one. It was the way he made plays, doing the right thing almost unconsciously, that caught our eye.

"He was perhaps the greatest centre we ever had on the coast; an equal favorite with Fred (Cyclone) Taylor in the minds of the masses. Lester and I always held to the theory that Taylor was the best all-rounder but many differed."

CROWD PLEASER

MacKay was a great crowd pleaser, Patrick said. "He was clean, splendidly courageous, a happy player with a stylish way of going. He was sensational in making quick breakaways. He was a sure shot in alone with the goalie. He could handle his stick and was almost as good a hook check as Frank Neighbor."

"I have lost a great friend," Patrick added. "MacKay was one of those who helped make pro hockey a great game. He was outstanding in every way."

MacKay's Funeral At Grand Forks

NELSON, B.C., June 1.—The body of Mickey MacKay, idol of Vancouver hockey fans two decades ago and one of the finest centremen the game ever produced, was sent to Grand Forks, B.C., where his funeral will take place Sunday.

The "wee Scot" was injured fatally when his car crashed into a telephone pole at nearby Ymir. He was travelling in connection with the mining business in which he has been engaged since leaving hockey.

Two Great Grads of Bygone Years

Here are two of the finest players ever to wear the famous black and gold of the Edmonton Grads. They are the Johnson sisters, Daisy and Dot (now Mrs. Ronnie Sherlaw). Both were forwards. Daisy is now the president of the Edmonton Commercial Graduates Basketball Club—the parent organization. The Johnson sisters will not be overlooked in the selection of all-time Grad teams, the ballots for the all-star club now being distributed to each of the Grads' final games, Saturday night, again on Monday and Wednesday, when the Grads play their final three-game series against the Chicago Queen Annes, ballots will be given to those attending the games. Remember, it's worth $500 to you if you pick the right team!

Spotlighting the Sport Girl

This seems the season for district school meets in track and field, and also for softball tournaments, both of which subjects receive considerable attention from the youthful athletes. And softball games take a leading position in many other local sports days. Lacombe announces preparation for 14 diamonds for the week-end sport day, though the present rain rather interfered with their program.

And we find a notice on our desk that a girls' softball organization meeting has been called to gather at the Edmonton Y.M. C.A. on Monday evening to ascertain the possibilities of another league. Apparently the Kingsway league has its full complement of teams but there seems to be further demand for girls games elsewhere. We understand that Boyle Street grounds will enter the discussions.

At the time of writing last week's note re girls around Alberta taking up horseshoe pitching, or quoits, we had not received word of the organization, a few days ago of the Dominion Women's Horseshoe Pitching Association. While Toronto teams form the nearest layout, efforts to secure teams from other parts of Canada will be undertaken. And doubtless any Alberta interest will be welcomed.

We found much interest in the several columns of reminiscences written by Myrtle Cook, a former president of the Womens Dominion Hockey League, and briefly quoted at the annual banquet of the Toronto Hockey League a few evenings ago.

Myrtle had been specially invited to be the speaker on behalf of the girls' teams at the banquet, which for the first time in the history of the Toronto League had women as its annual affair. One of her items concerns a long trek in a sleigh with her team to play a game in an Ontario town, dumped out twice en route, and arrived in time to partake of refreshments. But another team had been substituted for the game, as the hosts assumed they were not coming.

Bobbie Rosenfeld, of Toronto Globe, reprints a story from this paper regarding a certain reception given to one, Van Gralian, at a Toronto baseball game. Bobby particularly asks that the soldiers let her in on the next reception as she desires to have a little heart-to-heart talk with the Rochesterian.

And that reminds us that it will soon be time to write and talk in retrospection of Edmonton's greatest sport team of local history (in our opinion at least). Who will be the lucky one or ones at next Wednesday's game. At a club meeting the other evening, the subject came up and a vote was taken on for the entertainment of the members present. One vote favored five of the first Olympic team; another vote favored five of the 1930 players. While the seven to get the most tallies were Macdonald, Dann, McBurney, Dunn, MacCormack, Smith and Doc Johnson.

Going they folks do not all think alike, for $500.00 to be divided among five thousand who should be at Wednesday's game would amount to about ten cents each, according to our reckoning.

Kindly bear with us as we quote Bobbie Rosenfeld again: "On the limbo of memories. . . . It's hard to believe that Amsterdam is now in the hands of the criminal Hitler and his criminal gangsters. Amsterdam, the Olympic stadium, where we along with other white and scarlet clad, keen, eager young men and women stood erect, shoulder to shoulder, in the bright sunshine taking the traditional Olympic oath. . . . Amsterdam, where our sport warriors beat back the athletic flower of the world. . . . Percy Williams, the Vancouver schoolboy wonder.

Ethel Catherwood McClaren, the Saskston Lily . . . a quartet of Canadian lassies winning the first Olympic championship for women. . . . Canadians in the stands singing the "Maple Leaf Forever." . . . maybe off key, but with voices choked with emotion . . . Holland . . . windmills . . . tulips . . . lakes and canals . . . now blotted out by Hitler and his bullies."

Before crossing over to the Jasper avenue mainstem the other evening we rode through the South Side Athletic Grounds where nearly a score of track and field athletes were going through their practice paces and all of them seemed to be very intent on their work. Most of them from those we could see through the car window took part in the May 24th meet and doubtless were preparing for the coming months.

Maybe they know all about the dates, but we have passed a tip which was supposed to come from Wetaskiwin that the next big girls meet with provincial authority might be held at Stoney Plain. There appears to be considerable interest taken in such a project around our immediate western suburbs.

Frankly, it is the steady practicing which accomplishes some results. For instance, we read in the Lethbridge Herald, that one of Alberta's girl champion runners was beaten by a young school girl in sprints of May 24th sports. Just a case of really not having been prepared for running.

And our Edmonton girls must keep in shape if they figure on going to the women's Dominion track meet at Winnipeg which we are informed is being arranged for by the W.A.A.F. president, Miss Edith Mackenzie, of that city.

Vancouver reports having discovered a fifteen-year-old girl as another Babe Dikrikson-Zaharias in prospect, and coaches in that city seem somewhat excited over her chances against some of the eastern featured junior track stars. Winning claims to have two or three surprises in store and of course there is the annual claims of Ontario and Quebec to keep in mind.

Anyhow, if Miss Mackenzie visits Edmonton next week, the occasion being the Grads party, we will learn what the W.A.A.F. has found out about the Ferris-suspension edict.

SEMI-FINALS SCHEDULED IN O.C. FOOTBALL

LONTON, June 1.—Stripped of the glamor usually associated with the closing rounds of English cup competition semi-final battles for the football Association cup are scheduled for Saturday. Fulham and West Ham United clash in one game and Blackburn Rovers and Newcastle United in the other.

The huge crowds that passed through the turnstiles for Penultimate round games in pre-war years will be missing and it is possible the competing teams will be far from full strength. Intensification of Britain's war effort resulted in a seven-day working week in wartime industries and many players are unable to join their teams.

England's soccer season will close June 8 with the war cup final and concluding games in regional groups. In Scotland eastern and western group schedules were completed a week ago.

Fulham was not listed among the favorites for the title, but a few weeks ago, but the London club's stirring 5-2 victory over Everton in the fourth round put its stock away up. West Ham, challenger for the south "C" title, advanced in the semi-final through a 4-2 victory over Birmingham.

Blackburn and Newcastle United are likely to put up a tough battle for the right to represent the north of England in the final.

Guild Beats Leo Janiten In Hot Bout

CALGARY, June 1.—In a furious eight-round semi-final Lindsay Guild of Strome pounded out a decision over Leo Janiten, Edmonton. It was a re-match. In a previous bout here, Guild took the decision after a furious fight, and the contest last night was a repetition.

Guild piled up enough points in the first six rounds to warrant the decision, and the two judges and referee were unanimous. In the second round of the slugging affair, Guild connected to the solar plexus with a terrific right to send Janiten down for a count of six when the bell sounded, but Janiten came back strong to win the third round. Both fighters weighed 165.

Calgarians Play Martells For Trophy

CALGARY, June 1.—Calgary's first challenge of the year for the Rose Bowl, emblematic of the provincial four-ball golf championship will be made at 1 p.m. Sunday, when Stan Leonard and Wilder Ripley of the Calgary Golf and Polo will oppose the Martell brothers, Henry and Burns, at the Highlands club in Edmonton. With the exception of two weeks in 1938 when Stew Vickers and Duate Barr of Calgary were holders, the Rose Bowl has been in Edmonton for five years.

Record Entry List Hollywood Racing

LOS ANGELES, June 1.—Confronted with a record-breaking list of 27 entries, the Hollywood turf club said the inaugural Haggin stakes will be run off in two sections today, with a $10,000 purse for each race.

It will be the first time in California turf history that a major stake has been split and the original purse doubled.

The event is at six furlongs and restricted to two-year-old foaled in this state.

Equipment Bought To Boost Canada Arms Production

OTTAWA, June 1.—The department of munitions and supply announced Thursday that during the past week purchases worth more than $1,000,000 in Canadian accounts were made of special munition machines, machine tools and other equipment which will be used to boost production of Canadian plants by 250,000,000 rounds of small arms ammunition a year.

Five Are Named To Research Council

OTTAWA, June 1.—Appointment of five distinguished Canadians as members of the national research council for three years was announced last night in the Canada Gazette. They were Sir Frederick Banting and Dr. E. F. Burton of Toronto, W. B. Campbell of Windsor, Ont., Prof. R. H. Clark of Vancouver and Dean E. P. Fetherstonhaugh of Winnipeg.

A symptom of disorder of the thyroid gland is a distaste for meat.

Fighting Fox Back To Racing Warfare

NEW YORK, June 1.—Fighting Fox, William Woodward's "yea-and-no" horse who won—and lost—in his last outing, comes back to the races today looking for revenge in the $5,000-added Roseben handicap at Belmont Park.

A five-year-old and an unpredictable runner, he collected $75,625 last year. So far this season, he wound up first in the six-furlong Thurmont handicap, carrying 130 pounds, and the 1 1-16th-mile Excelsior handicap, carrying 128. He finished a length in front in the latter, but was disqualified because of a foul, and Maxwell Howard's Shifting Sands was awarded the race.

In today's three-quarter affair, the Fox will carry 132 pounds. The Chief slan is in the field of seven.

Play will get underway p.m. The second game is M evening, the third on Wednes. On Thursday the Grads offici avid their 25 years of basketb domination with a banquet an dance.

Attendance for the recent series with Wichita was disappointing, but the Grads are hoping that Edmonton fans will make the one starting tonight a fitting final.

Although the Grad organization is winding up a quarter of a century of basketball there is nothing decrepit about the team it is fielding against the powerful Chicago club. The present lineup may not be the strongest in Grad history, but it is certainly not the weakest.

Dann, Munton and Brown are three of the finest snipers that have ever worn Grad livery. Mabel Munton McCloy rates as one of their best all-time guards. Williamson is a centre worthy of following in the steps of many of the great stars that preceded her in this position. Jack MacRitchie, Betty Bawden and Winnie Gallen are the rookie members of the team. They have not yet had time to reach their peaks, but all give real promise.

Tonight the fans will again have a chance for the $500 prize the Grads are giving to the patron who picks the five most popular Grads of all time—the popularity to be decided by the ballots submitted

THREE ESCAPE INJURY WHEN CLUB WRECKED

DRUMHELLER, June 1—Three men escaped serious injury yesterday when their cars were covered with wreckage as a terrific wind demolished the Drumheller Golf Club house.

Jack Emchuk, Drumheller, was slightly cut about the head by flying glass, but the other two, Gus Yavis and Russell Blake, were unhurt. Yavis and Blake were in one car and Emchuk in another, parked in the lee of the building. The men dug themselves out of the wreckage unaided.

The club house was destroyed with loss of $800. No one was in the building. Chairs and tables were scattered over the course for half a mile.

The wind lasted for only a few minutes and the club house was the only damage reported last night.

Communist Gets 2-Year Term For Cutting Cables

TORONTO, June 1.—Convicted of cutting hydro-electric power lines, Dan Trynff, alien who has been in Canada 27 years, was sentenced yesterday by Magistrate R. J. Browne to two years in penitentiary. Crown counsel had recommended Trynff's internment at the expiration of his term. He was held originally under defence of Canada regulations, but was convicted of a charge under the criminal code of damaging wires used for the transmission of electricity.

Police said at the time of Trynff's arrest he was carrying a book indicating his membership in the Communist party.

Labor Supply Studied For War Industries

OTTAWA, June 1.—Hon. Norman McLarty, Labor minister, said in a statement today that the government, in consultation with leaders of labor and industry, is studying the problems of labor supply and conditions involved in the present order to speed up Canada's war industries.

It is expected a statement will be made shortly as to the attention being given by the government to these matters.

Italian Tourist Head In New York Quits In Protest

NEW YORK, June 1.—Godfred Pantaleoni, for many years a representative of the Rome government Tourist Bureau, resigned as head of the Italian tourist information office, announced his resignation yesterday in protest against the Rome-Berlin axis operation between Hitler and Mussolini.

This association, he said, was "a one-way ride when will end in disaster for Italy if she enters the conflict as an ally of Germany."

Modification Of Natural Gas Sales Tax Is Requested

LONDON, Ont., June 1.—Modification of the eight per cent wartime sales tax imposed upon natural gas consumers in Canada was urged yesterday in a brief drawn up at the annual convention of the Natural Gas and Petroleum Association of Canada.

Delegates representing almost 50 Canadian natural gas companies and allied firms passed a resolution asking that gas used for cooking and other minor domestic purposes should be taxed but spokesmen insisted there should be a "more equitable" revision.

France Arrests 33 Communists

PARIS, June 1—Robert Blache, former official of the banned Communist newspaper, "Humanite," and 32 other members of a secret ring, alleged to operate under the Comintern, were arrested yesterday. Blache, including Blache, will face the death penalty if convicted.

Pedlar Sentenced Under Defence Act

FLIN FLON, Man., June 1—John Fair, a door-to-door salesman, was found guilty here yesterday on two charges of uttering statements likely to prejudice recruiting and was sentenced to six months' imprisonment on each charge by Magistrate O. F. Wright.

Tactics Criticized

GENERAL ANDRE CORAP, divisional commander of what Prime Minister Paul Reynaud described in the French Senate as "the shortest army," which Reynaud said was a major factor in the break through of the German invaders along the Meuse River. Describing failure to hold defenses in that area, Reynaud said, "more than half the Corap army divisions had not yet reached the Meuse, although they had the shortest movement to make as they were close to the pivot."

NAZI LOSSES ARE PLACED AT 500,000 MEN

LONDON, June 1.—First editions of all London evening papers today announced that the German hand lost 500,000 men in their effort to annihilate the British expeditionary force in Flanders.

Their headlines proclaimed "Nazis Lose 500,000 As Allies Fight It Out," or variations on the same theme. They said this was the cost of the German "death trap" in northern France and Belgium.

"Goods originating in these countries in Canada or actually in transit to Canada on or before the 10th day of May, 1940, may, when released by the Customs, be entered at treaty rates."

Vancouver Man To Represent Supply Branch In England

OTTAWA, June 1.—Appointment of Charles A. Banks of Vancouver as Canadian representative in England of the department of munitions and supply was announced last night.

Mr. Banks, who serves without remuneration, leaves shortly for England where he will act as the minister's representative in the Canadian department and British authorities.

Mr. Banks is managing director of the Bulolo Gold Dredging Ltd., Placer Development Ltd., and Pato Consolidated Gold Dredging Ltd., a member of other mining companies all of which have their head office in Vancouver.

Seven Justices Of Peace Appointed In N. W. Territories

OTTAWA, June 1.—Appointment of seven justices of the peace in and for the North West Territories was announced last night in the Canada Gazette. They were: Drs. J. P. Harvey, Fort Norman, N.W.T.; Wm. Greenwell, Fort Simpson; Lester D. Livingstone, Aklavik; A. C. MacPhee, Port Radium; John Melling, Mackenzie; Thomas Crawford, Pangnirtung and Henry A. Larson, sergeant of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police aboard the R.C.M.P. schooner "St. Roch."

Dane Ships With American Cargoes May Finish Trips

NEW YORK, June 1.—A number of Danish vessels carrying American-owned cargoes, which have been tied up in neutral ports to avoid possible seizure by the Allies, will be permitted to complete their voyages unmolested, it was announced last night.

Myron L. Black, secretary for American representatives of Danish shipping interests, said his group had been notified by the state department that a memorandum had been received from the British ministry of shipping stating the "vessels named" could proceed.

J. W. McDonald Is Appointed Judge District Court

OTTAWA, June 1.—J. W. McDonald of Macleod, Alta., has been appointed a judge of the district court within the district of Southern Alberta and also a local judge of the Supreme Court of Alberta, it was announced yesterday.

Pardoned Spy Of Last War Arrested

PARIS, June 1.—Dr. Adrian Maertens, Flemish nationalist who during the last war was sentenced to death for dealing with the enemy and then pardoned, was arrested yesterday at Audilley, South General France. Maertens carried about 1,000,000 francs in gold pieces with him, police said.

Shipyard Walkout Said "100 Per Cent"

KEARNY, N. J., June 1—A strike labelled "100 per cent complete" by a union spokesman tied up construction yesterday on six United States warships in the yards of the Federal Shipbuilding and Drydock Company as federal officials expressed hopes of an early settlement.

New Uniforms For City Police

Members of the uniformed department of the city police force will be given a shirt on the occasion of the annual inspection by civic officials, to be held in Rocket Square on the afternoon of June 5. It was announced by Chief Constable A. G. Shute Saturday that all men parading will be attired in new uniforms.

The inspection, which is made each year by the mayor, commissioners and city council, will start at 3 p.m. and drills by the police force is conducted by Sgt. Maj. Jack Russell.

GERMANS BOMB CIVILIANS TO CLOG HIGHWAYS

LONDON, June 1.— British soldiers who had undergone the furious gunfire and bombing of the Nazis in the past three weeks in northern France told today of an enemy technique to tie up Allied communications.

Planes deliberately bombed small towns and villages behind the Allied lines, chasing civilian populations onto roads and clogging transports. They said Nazi planes machine-gunned the men in the water as well as bombing and machine-gunning those on land.

3 COUNTRIES PLACED UNDER TRADING BAN

OTTAWA, June 1.—The Netherlands, Belgium and Luxembourg now are proscribed territory under the trading with the enemy regulations, the national revenue department announced last night.

The announcement was contained in a memorandum to collectors of customs and excise and added:

"All importers who have goods originating in such countries at your port should be instructed to apply to the office of the custodian, department of secretary of state, for a release, and the goods are not to be delivered pending such a release.

"Goods originating in these countries in Canada or actually in transit to Canada on or before the 10th day of May, 1940, may, when released by the Customs, be entered at treaty rates."

Wallace Insists Commodity Marts Retain Grain Pegs

WASHINGTON, June 1.—Agriculture Secretary Wallace was authoritatively reported last night to be insisting that the United States futures commodity markets retain present minimum prices on grains. Grain quotations on these markets were pegged at closing prices on May 18 after declines brought about by war developments.

Nazi Groups In Uruguay Receive Orders In Berlin

MONTEVIDEO, June 1—Uruguay passed a nine point defense program last night with arms purchases and compulsory military training in the schools as a special parliamentary commission reported finding evidence of Nazi organizations directed from Berlin.

Hugo Fernandez, who heads the commission, said 3,000 Germans in Uruguay were dominated by such organizations.

TODAY'S MARKETS

Toronto Stocks

TORONTO, June 1.—Still under the influence of the uncertainties of war, the stock market opened the new month with a drab display.

Walkers common firmed 1½ to 32¼. Shawinigan advanced a point while losses of a point or more came out for Dominion Foundries, Canadian Locomotive and Dehavilland Aircraft. Imperial Oil, International Petroleum, Brazilian and Massey-Harris were all small gainers. British American Oil had a minor setback. Okalta Oil at 65 was down 7 and Calgary-Edmonton was off 5 to 1.20. Acme dropped a cent. Royalite sold at 20, unchanged.

Montreal and Toronto

MONTREAL, June 1.—Prices were steady to slightly higher in listless late trade on the stock market today.

Bell Telephone had a gain of more than a point. St. Lawrence Corporation preferred, Bathurst and Howard Smith backed minor amounts while Price Brothers chalked up a minimum fraction.

Canadian Car common and preferred displayed small additions.

New York Stocks

NEW YORK, June 1—War imponderables continued to act as a drag on stock market buyers today and leading issues were permitted to slip fractions to a point or so.

Lacking much support were U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, United Aircraft, Douglas Aircraft, Lockheed, Westinghouse, Du Pont, Johns-Manville, American Smelting and Texas Corp.

Among resistant shares were American Telephone Sperry, Allied Chemical and Phelps Dodge.

WHEAT PRICES CLIMB HIGHER

WINNIPEG, June 1—Moderate export buying, together with continued lack of selling pressure, gave wheat futures prices independent strength on Winnipeg Grain Exchange today. Quotations climbed nearly two cents soon after the opening, dropped back a little and then rallied again to close 1⅛ cents higher, July at 75½ and October 77⅛ cents.

The Danish government announced that in future a coarse type of wheat and rye will be milled for bread making as a measure of economy. The Norwegian ministry of agriculture for the area under German control has issued an appeal for maximum production of foodstuffs. The food situation is critical on account of the German invasion. In Northern Norway, however, the government has laid in large stores of wheat as an emergency reserve. Rumania has now banned the export of sunflower seed oil, castor oil, mustard seed oil and linseed oil. Rumania sold to Jugoslavia three million bushels of corn recently. Freight was recently booked from South Australia to South Africa at 60s per ton; this is equal to $12 a long ton at the fixed exchange rate. Argentine to Ireland 125s, which is equal to about $25 a long ton. Australian bulk wheat to America $17 a ton.

5,000 TROOPS PRACTICED IN NIGHT CONVOY

Canadians At Aldershot Show They Are Ready For Action

By EDWIN JOHNSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

ALDERSHOT, June 1—Reminiscent of behind-the-scenes activity of the last war 5,000 seasoned troops of the 1st Division, Canadian Active Service Force, moved in ghost-like columns during the night along the inky, winding rural roads of England.

They were out on the most realistic and pretentious convoy exercise to date to test their mobility and preparedness for a call to active service.

CANADA'S MEN READY

The demonstration gave ample proof that Canada's men are ready.

In the days of horse transport a move of such proportions would have taken more than a week. The night's operation was accomplished in a few hours.

Unknown to officers and other ranks, the assembly of the convoy, its progress and exercise were observed from start to finish by Major-General A. G. L. McNaughton, pistol leader of the division who takes every opportunity to see how his "boys" are coming along.

With him was his aide-de-camp, Lieut. P. F. Seagram of Toronto, and Major W. A. I. Anglin, general staff officer (second grade), of Saint John.

Every vehicle was checked by General McNaughton as it passed. Here and there he found a light too bright, some units lagged too far behind the others while other minor discrepancies were noticed.

"This is the kind of practical experience that is going to do us the world of good," he remarked. "Men will profit by what they've gone through tonight."

While he was talking, a lorryful of singing men glided by. One stuck out his head and shouted to the general: "Hey, Mac, what the hell town is this?" He had no idea he was addressing his general officer commanding.

The intermittent flashing of torches brought an alert patrol of home defence guards on to the scene.

"We thought at first we had run into a flock of parachutists," one of them chuckled.

Pertinax Reports Leopold Planning To Hold Plebiscite

PARIS, June 1.—Pertinax reported in the newspaper L'Ordre yesterday that Leopold, deposed King of the Belgians, planned to call general elections in the German-conquered territory as a "popular plebiscite" endorsing his capitulation.

Fernand Laurent, writing in Le Jour, said Leopold's capitulation was a premeditated act dating back in origin several years.

Genevieve Tabouis wrote in L'Oeuvre that early last October Leopold notified the French government Belgium would regard as an "unfriendly act" the construction of important French defence works between Montmedy and Dunkerque.

BRITISH NOW ARE CONSCIOUS WAR NEARNESS

People Told Bluntly To Expect Bombing Raids Soon

By D. E. BURRITT
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, June 1—A complacency no longer marks the average Briton's attitude towards the war.

Until only a couple of weeks ago, [illegible] since the start of Hitler's surge to the sea through the low countries Britons have been given a new conception of war preparedness and the aftermath of battle.

Now come daily and nightly press and radio warnings by government spokesmen who hammer into the public stern words of caution and warning of what is in store for them, now that the scene of battle is at their back door.

KNOW WHAT TO DO

No longer do the spokesmen suggest the possibility that Britain will be bombed. They say pointblank it is what the future holds and tell the public bluntly that it must be alert for subsequent dangers and know, with no uncertainty, what to do when it comes.

Everybody is aware of the sudden spurt of industry. And almost within earshot of London can be heard the never-ceasing test firing of new artillery. Along the east and south coasts can be heard the ever-increasing thunder of battle.

Refugees—hundreds and hundreds of new recruits from the legion of homeless—have been surging into Britain for weeks. Hospital ships are bringing home the wounded soldiers. Shipload after shipload of fighting men is pouring in. Casualty lists are being issued with depressing monotony.

BOMB SHELTERS

Workmen are laboring into the dusk constructing still more bomb shelters, many of them right in the middle of wide avenues in the downtown section of London. Machine gun emplacements and barbed wire entanglements are bobbing up all over the place.

More and more restrictions are announced to prevent the work of the "fifth column." The armed "parashoot" patrol is already in service. The public is warned over and over again what to do in case of the arrival of spies, parachutists and in other emergencies.

NURSES SOUGHT

Trained nurses also are being sought. Even midwives are asked to volunteer for work in evacuee centres which are gaining an increasing population daily.

Also by radio and press appeals to the public are made to save everything from waste paper and garbage to the tinsel tops of milk bottles. Nothing must be wasted. Everywhere you see youngsters gathering waste paper and workmen dismantling iron fences, even around the grounds of Buckingham Palace.

CHILDREN MOVED

No longer is it left to the parent to say whether their children will or will not be evacuated. The government marks out the danger area and the children are moved. Some 40,000 will be moved this week-end. Even adults are ordered to vacate some areas.

Coupled with the assurances that there is no need for panic, nearly every government spokesman warns that "We must expect the worst and be ready for it.

Committee Will Submit Report On Text Book

The special committee appointed by Premier William Aberhart to investigate the high school text book, "The World of Today," with a view to recommending alterations and revisions, is expected to submit its report to the government sometime next week.

Distribution of the text book was halted when the investigation got under way. Existing copies were not called in.

The investigation arose out of last year's Calgary municipal election when a candidate for school board charged the book contained pernicious propaganda."

An interim report was made a few weeks ago and some changes were made in the text. Headed by H. M. E. Evans of this city the committee also included Dr. F. S. McCall, principal of Alberta College; Maj. D. R. Innes, Murray McDonald and A. E. Might.

Grain Growers Ask Committee To Deal With War Problems

WINNIPEG, June 1.—United Grain Growers Limited, operators of scores of grain elevators across the prairie wheatlands, yesterday announced they had requested the premiers of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta to set up an interprovincial committee representative of western agriculture to deal with new war-time emergencies affecting the marketing of agricultural products.

With their request, the U.G.G. suggested a consultation here between Premier John Bracken of Manitoba, Premier Patterson of Saskatchewan and Premier Aberhart of Alberta. The latter two are in Winnipeg attending the convention of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association which concluded yesterday.

Half Of Silver Fox Furs Sold

LONDON, June 1.—Hudson's Bay Company officials yesterday announced the sale of almost half of the 11,235 silver fox furs on offer at the sale in progress here. Prices have advanced 10 per cent over those obtained at the April sale with an average price of $18.95 received for each skin compared with an average of $17.30 in April.

Flying Schools Will Be Opened At Three Points

OTTAWA, June 1.— Elementary flying schools of the Commonwealth Air Training Plan are expected to open at Vancouver, London, Ont., and Fort William, Ont., in the next two months, Hon. C. G. Power, the air minister, announced today.

Provision also has been made for establishment of a service flying school at Moose Jaw, Sask., and development of the airdrome will start well ahead of the date on which facilities should be made available for the student pilots from elementary schools, Mr. Power said. [illegible] will be developed at Bulltress and Hoham.

Phone Pioneer

W. J. WILDE, member of the staff of the provincial government telephone system for the past 31 years, who was elected president of the Alberta chapter No. 46, Telephone Pioneers of America, at the fourth annual meeting held in Calgary Friday.

Veteran Edmonton Telephone Worker Chapter President

CALGARY, June 1—W. J. Wilde of Edmonton, the oldest telephone man in Canada by virtue of his 54 years continuous service, was elected president of Alberta Chapter No. 46, Telephone Pioneers of America, at the fourth annual meeting here last night.

W. C. Bruce, Edmonton, the retiring president, presided. Approximately 40 were present from Edmonton, Calgary, Red Deer, Olds, Didsbury, Lethbridge, High River and Drumheller.

Other officers elected were Tom Spalding, Calgary, vice-president; A. M. Mitchell, Edmonton, secretary-treasurer; Frank Jackson, Gerald B. Dickie and E. Dolan, all of Calgary, directors.

The 1941 meeting will be held at Edmonton.

Mr. Wilde, who has been with the provincial government telephone company for the past 31 years, commenced work in Montreal as a boy when he worked in the factory of the Bell Telephone Co. Two years later, the Northern Electric Co. was inaugurated, and the staff of the Bell factory taken over by the new company. He was with the Northern Electric for 23 years before coming to Edmonton to join the provincial government telephone service.

Native of Montreal, Mr. Wilde recently celebrated his 64th birthday.

ROAD REPORTS

Safety Slogan — When crossing railroad tracks—stop, look, listen and be safe.

Saturday's road report — Cloudy today. Dirt roads are very muddy. All main highways are fair to good. Heavy rains have fallen in the near north and the Peace River road is very muddy.

Note—A ban has been placed on all trucks, trailers and buses from Carvell corner to Evansburg.

COURT ORDERLY RETIRES AFTER LONG SERVICE

Orderly at the Edmonton court house for the last 15 years, Thomas "Tom" Smith retired on superannuation Friday evening.

"Smithy," as he was known to members of the legal profession through Northern Alberta, joined the provincial civil service following his return from overseas in 1918. He was elevator operator at the legislative buildings for several years before his transfer to the court house as orderly.

Mr. Smith enlisted on November 4, 1914, and served with the 51st battalion in France. He was severely wounded in the right arm in a daylight raid at Vimy Ridge on March 17, 1916.

Prior to the war Mr. Smith carried on business as a painter and decorator in Edmonton.

Friday evening he was presented with a purse of gold by members of the court house staff in recognition of the extremely cordial relations which always existed between them during his 15 years of service as orderly.

Gets Jail Term

Convicted of being unlawfully at large, following conviction and sentence of one year imposed by a supreme court for conversion, Charles R. Echlin was sentenced by Magistrate Miller Saturday to serve an additional six months in jail. According to evidence, accused had appealed against the conviction and one-year sentence, but had lost the appeal. When the appeal court made its decision however, Echlin was absent in Detroit. He was returned and charged with the additional offence by R.C.M.P.

Elks' Officer

MAJ. G. G. WANNOP, officer commanding the 17th Calgary Field Ambulance at Ponoka and president of the Alberta Elks Association, who will officiate at the association's convention at Red Deer, June 10 and 11. Reminding members of their pledges to Canada and the Empire, he said: "Upon the declaration of war Elkdom pledged itself to give its unlimited support in our national emergency. We are fully aware that dictatorship has challenged the existence of not only Elkdom, but all fraternal orders, and threatens to annihilate that liberty and freedom for which we stand. We must therefore remember our obligation to stand ready to hear the cry of distress and by precept and example to exemplify our motto—Charity."

Maseflield Thanked

CANBERRA—Prime Minister R. G. Menzies has thanked John Masefield, poet laureate, for his verses of tribute to Australians who volunteered for service overseas.

WINGS NORTH

With Scotty Moir at the controls and a full load of passengers comfortably ensconced inside, one of Yukon Southern's Barkley-Grow airliners was northbound from Edmonton for Fort St. John Saturday. There it will meet another Barkley-Grow, piloted by Sheldon Luck and out of Vancouver, and will transfer some of the passengers and mail to it for Whitehorse. Luck was scheduled to reach Whitehouse Saturday afternoon.

Al Brown, of Mackenzie Air Services, arrived at McMurray from Yellowknife Friday afternoon. Harry Hayter is at Smith and Archie McMullen is at Aklavik.

Members of the Cine Club of Edmonton will be guests at a showing of a group of motion pictures taken by J. C. Pendray of Victoria, president of the British American Paint Company, in All Saints' parish hall on Wednesday at 8:15 p.m. The pictures will include the royal visit to Victoria, 6,000 miles trip to Mexico, and the Calgary Stampede, as well as a technicolor film, "Bapco Land". Arrangements for the film have been made by the Cine Club with F. Pearce, secretary to Mr. Pendray.

Gets Board Post

BRUCE V. MASSIE, well-known Edmonton lawyer, who has been appointed as creditor commissioner on the Board of Review appointed under the Farmers' Creditors' Arrangement Act, according to an announcement made here Saturday. Mr. Massie succeeds Col. G. B. McLeod, who has been acting as creditor commissioner on the board and who is retiring on July 1 owing to ill-health.

Water Basin Bids

Bids have been received by the city commissioners for the construction of the new settling basin for the waterworks department which is a necessary preliminary to the installation of water softening equipment. Bids opened Saturday, were as follows: J. C. Haddow, $33,846; Fred L. Allyn, $37,852; Poole Construction Co., $39,282; Hulburt and Wilton, $39,400; H. G. Macdonald, $39,888; Bennett and White construction Co. Ltd., $40,957.

Troop Training At Garrison Is Proceeding Fast

Training of 300 troops of the Edmonton Garrison is proceeding rapidly, according to Lt.-Col. E. Brown, M.M., E.D., Area Commandant. This total is about equally divided between an Edmonton quota of the Royal Canadian Engineers for the 2nd Canadian Divisional Pioneer Battalion and reinforcement for the Edmonton Regiment. The engineers all are specialists.

Col. Brown declared that the regular Sunday Garrison church parade had been cancelled for this week to allow soldiers to attend their own churches.

He announced that Maj. J. H. Kennedy of the 18th Alberta Dragoons had been appointed Deputy Assistant Provost Marshal for Military District No. 13 with headquarters at Calgary. He will be in charge of the provost service for the province. He leaves in the immediate future to commence his duties.

Funeral Held For Pioneer Citizen

In tribute to the late Mrs. Mary Hallet Scott, 80, of the Chappelle Manor, 12525 104 avenue, and wife of the late Hon. Chief Justice David Lynch Scott of the Supreme Court of Alberta, many friends gathered with relatives at All Saints' cathedral on Saturday afternoon to attend the funeral services, at which Capt. Canon C. F. A. Clough officiated, assisted by Canon A. M. Trendall. Mrs. Scott, who died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Stanley C. Miller of Moose Jaw, on Wednesday, was one of the earliest residents of Edmonton. Pall-bearers were George Henwood, K.C., deputy attorney general of the province; J. Walker, D. L. McGill, George Steer, K.C., Norman Campbell and Hugh E. Pearson.

Dance Review Is Presented On Friday

Gay, colorful and romantic, the first annual revue of the Juneau School of Dancing was presented in the Masonic temple on Friday evening when an enthusiastic audience was in attendance.

"Mistress Mary's Garden" was the central theme of the revue, which was presented in three acts in settings of English, Dutch and Irish gardens. A kaeidoscope of colorful movement, the production was set against interesting backgrounds and the dancers attired in attractive costumes set a high standard in the first of their annual presentations.

Pianists for the performance were Miss Dorothy Singleton and Miss Jean Ward. Costumes of Miss Bond and her pupils were designed and made by Mrs. D. G. Thomas. Mrs. Inez MacDonald was in charge of make-up and the stage properties were loaned for the production by C. Woodward Ltd. and the Dutch Mill.

TAKING PART

Taking part in the revue were Joyce Martin, David Wharton, Robert Clifford, Arthur Martin, William Staiger, Ruth Lemay, Florda Simmons, Lois Taplin, Lorraine Fredricks, Brynn Levine, Katherine Bordius, Doreen Lardner, Gail Marskell, Diane Scott, Francis Wharton, Joyce Holub, Sherna Levine, Patricia McGillon, Joan Solowan, Jean Emmelman.
